Racism taunts for Thatcher

Times News Services

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher today walked into a blisteringly hostile reception, including accusations of racism and arrogance, on her arrival in the Zambian capital of Lusaka for Wednesday's opening of the Commonwealth Conference.

Thatcher, in hints that her Conservative government will move toward rapprochement with Zimbabe-Rhodesia, "demonstrates the blind and pusillanimous arrogance that has marked successive British governments' attitudes to Rhodesia," said The Times of Zambia, a mouthpiece for the government of Kenneth Kaunda in a Monday editorial.

Another government-owned newspaper, The Daily Mail, went further and described Mrs. Thatcher as "racially-prejudiced" because she "openly supports rebels who have been condemned by every sensible person in the world."

Lambasting her for the second straight day, the Mail today said Zambia "is a free country, and we shall not stand anybody showing arrogance or making those Margaret racist gestures to (former Rhodesian prime minister Ian) Smith and (current Zimbabwe-Rhodesian leader Abel) Muzorewa on our soil."

The taunts hurled at Thatcher have scrupulously avoided mention of the Queen who is on the fourth day of a visit to Zambia in preparation for the conference.

Britain's Conservative newspapers have responded in kind to the attack.

The London Daily Mail said Mrs. Thatcher was greeted "with the diplomatic courtesy a gang of muggers might reserve for a solitary woman travelling on a late-night tube (subway)."

The Daily Telegraph warned her not to be coerced into delaying the lifting of economic sanctions against Zimbabwe-Rhodesia, saying "this would be the triumph of the bullet over the ballot box."

Since Mrs. Thatcher has made no public statement since her arrival Monday, the Lusaka press presumably is anticipating that at the 39-state conference opening Wednesday she will try to defend Muzorewa and Smith.

The issues of whether to recognize the Muzorewa government and the potential lifting of economic sanctions against his government are expected to dominate the week-long meeting.

French labels or goods seized, merchants told

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The federal consumer affairs ministry has warned health food wholesalers and other importers in B.C. to comply with bilingual labelling regulations or have their goods seized.

A ministry spokesman said today it is the the first time a seizure warning has been issued.

In past years, the ministry had just asked for voluntary compliance without accompanying the request with a threat.

The warning has gone out to all importers and not just health food companies, he said.

The crackdown on products without the French label, one Victoria distributor said, could endanger the health food industry.

Michael Monahan, owner of Bright Life Health Food Distributors, said Ottawa has threatened to seize most of his products if he fails to get French on the label by Aug. 26.

He said he couldn't possibly comply with the ultimatum in such a short period of time.

He has written a letter of protest to federal Consumer Affairs minister Allan Lawrence on behalf of British Columbia health food wholesalers and retailers.

"I don't know why they (the federal government) should suddenly pick on the health food industry," he said. "They never enforced this stupid regulation in the past."

Monahan said the new directive has put the health food industry in an impossible situation.

"About 90 per cent of our goods comes from the United States. Most of these products are not available anywhere in Canada. And these companies in California don't want to have to put French labels on their products.

"They think the law is stupid. I think it's stupid, the retailers think it's stupid. If they want bilingual labels it would make more sense here to put Chinese on the labels.

"This regulation hits the small companies more than the big ones. The major companies can afford to pay the extra cost of bilingual labels."

Monahan said he suspects major Canadian food companies have pressured the federal government to enforce the regulation to put small competitors out of business.

Monahan has written to local MPs and to the provincial ministry of consumer and corporate affairs for help.

A local health food retailer, John Kelly of Country Cupboards Natural Foods, said the bilingualism labelling order would be a severe blow to all health food retailers.

"Many will be forced out of business if this regulation is enforced."

Soviet vessel rams fishboat

Three Port Alberni residents escaped unharmed today when their fishboat was in collision with a Soviet freighter in the Alberni Canal at 12:45 a.m.

The Vladimir Mayakovsky, under the command of Capt. L. Khonechenko and with pilot Capt. A. H. Ross aboard, was seaward-bound from Port Alberni in the China Creek area when she was in collision with the 29-foot gillnetter Full Nelson.

The fishboat's owner, Laurie Nelson, and his passengers, Rose Stewart and Sheila August, were thrown into the water and the Full Nelson sank to the waterline.

They were picked up by the fishing vessel Julia Evelyn II and were later transferred to the pilot boat MV Riley.

Nelson was admitted to the West Coast General Hospital for examination and later released.

Port manager Capt. Don Brookes said there was a large fleet of gillnetters and seiners in the canal at the time of the incident.

In addition, a spokesman for the RCMP Alberni detachment said it was foggy at the time.

B.C. alcoholics start young

The typical alcohol abuser is a 25-year-old unskilled single male earning less than average salary who has been drinking since the age of 13, a government study has found.

Admitted alcohol abusers in the province spend more than $50 a month on liquor.

Interestingly enough, this is about the same amount spent by well-paid, heavy drinking men aged 18 to 24.

Problem drinkers number about 11 per cent of the drinking population. The survey found that 9 in 10 adult British Columbians consume at least some alcohol.

The report was prepared for the ministry of consumer and corporate affairs following an extensive survey.

The study found young drinkers are considered to be the second most serious school problem after drugs. In the adult world, alcohol-related problems are third in a list of social concerns after inflation and unemployment.

The concern over young drinkers appears to be well-founded judging by the statements of problem drinkers who admit to starting consuming alcohol in early junior high school.

The ministry describes problem drinkers as those who consume alcohol to excess at least 10 per cent of the time.

The study found the majority of drinkers consume liquor moderately and infrequently. Even so, most began drinking at the age of 16.

The category of heavy drinkers most likely to lose control of their habit on occasion tends to be males, aged 18 to 24, earning more than $20,000 a year and gainfully employed.

The survey found three out of five drinkers have consumed alcohol to excess on occasion.

Many of those admit to drinking at least eight drinks at a sitting while some say they have consumed more than 10.

The study also found that 40 per cent of the population drink outside their homes at least once a week — mostly in restaurants and beer parlors.

Drinkers in their early teens are not being served in liquor outlets, but are obtaining alcohol from their homes or from older friends.

Few of the people surveyed said they supply liquor to their children for their parties. But one in three of the problem drinkers admit they supply alcohol to their under-aged children.

Older teens are entering licensed premises in ever-increasing numbers. Last year, charges against minors increased 52 per cent to an all-time high of 4,008.

Rationing sobering thought

NUUK, Greenland (UPI) — Hard times are ahead for the world's hardiest drinkers in Greenland, where the bottle provides comfort against the Arctic cold and desolation.

Under a new law, Greenland's rugged fur trappers and fishermen — and everyone else — will have to slap their ration coupons as well as their cash on the bar to get service.

A typical night's boozing will be moderate in the extreme, consisting of 2.4 bottles of beer, 0.4 bottles of wine, or 0.1 bottles of hard liquor.

Rationing is Greenland's answer to chronic alcoholism among its 50,000 inhabitants.

Under the rationing scheme, each adult will be given 72 coupons a month.

Owner of blazing boat must pay for damages

VANCOUVER (CP) — The owner of a pleasure craft that caught fire at Coal Harbor Marina two years ago was ordered Monday to pay for the $166,882 damage to adjacent boat shelters and boats caught in the blaze.

The British Columbia Supreme Court award by Mr. Justice E. Davie Fulton was against Harrison Doig, owner of the 36-foot Golden Summer, and will go to Walithy Charters Ltd., Deacon Marine Ltd., Landmark Marine Ltd. and Capilano Shipping Co. Ltd.

The Golden Summer caught fire about two hours after it had been towed back to its dock by a Vancouver police boat after a leak in the cruiser's fuel system interrupted a fueling operation at a Coal Harbor gas barge and left gas in the bilge. Doig turned off the vessel's electric switches, had the bilge flushed and opened all the hatches before returning his boat to the dock in the inlet between Stanley Park and part of downtown Vancouver.

Mr. Justice Fulton said that neither Doig nor the officers in command of the police boat were, in the circumstances, negligent in returning the vessel to the dock, but he held that Doig, realizing from the smell of the fumes remaining in the boat that there must still be gas in the bilge, was negligent in staying aboard to off-load supplies.

In moving about during this operation, said the judge, Doig caused a spark in a highly volatile atmosphere that touched off the blaze.

"I am satisfied that if he had got himself and his passengers off the boat as soon as it was berthed at the marina, this fire would not have happened," Mr. Justice Fulton said.

Outlook bleak for Canada

PARIS (CP) — A bleak forecast of continuing high jobless rates and strong inflationary pressures is contained in a report on Canada's economic prospects published today by the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development.

In its annual economic survey of Canada, the 24-member OECD — made up of the world's major non-Communist countries — also warns that skilful manoeuvring will be needed to prevent the dollar from slipping further against other world currencies.

However, on a brighter note, the report says the short-term impact of oil price increases is likely to be felt less in Canada than in other Western industrialized countries.

Ironically, the report suggests that Ottawa consider broadening the powers of the National Commission on Inflation in a bid to tackle the country's economic problems. Last week, Finance Minister John Crosbie announced that the board is to be disbanded.

The report says the commission "will undoubtedly play a useful role in improving general public understanding of the inflationary process, but this may not be enough."

"It could, for instance, be considered whether the commission could become more actively involved as an arbiter in the (labor) negotiation process in order to better reconcile sectorial claims with the national interest."

The 64-page report also says "it would seem desirable" to lift measures protecting industries that are not internationally competitive despite regional considerations."

It cites as an example of a protected industry Quebec's clothing business, the province's largest employer in the manufacturing sector.

Turning to predictions for the coming year, the report says unemployment might climb to 8.5 per cent, unfavorable productivity levels are expected to continue and little change is likely in Canada's balance of payments deficit — expected to be about $5 billion in the coming year.

Unlike other members of the 24-country OECD, Canada's balance of payments deficit grew last year, the report says.

Cost of eating up 12% in year

OTTAWA (CP) — The cost of food consumed at home jumped sharply this month, leaving food prices 12.2 per cent higher than the same time last year.

The agriculture department said Monday that the cost of fresh fruit, beef and cereal jumped in the four-week period that ended July 20.

As a result the home food cost for the period was 3.2 per cent higher than for the preceding four-week period.

The figures indicate food prices are on the rise again after a brief slump last month when the department said food prices were climbing at a rate of only 9.3 per cent.

The department was issuing its second food-at-home price survey since taking over the job from the anti-inflation board. The survey is based on information obtained in weekly surveys of supermarkets in 12 cities.

The annual food cost increase of 12.2 per cent compares with the latest inflation rate of 8.9 per cent.

However, the 12.2 per cent still is lower than the 21.9 per cent recorded in March, the highest rate in about five years.

The department said the cost of a basic diet meeting the nutritional needs of a family of four was $61.84 a week in July, up $1.15 from June and 10.5 per cent higher than last year.

The department said beef prices are expected to drop temporarily until the late summer or fall when they will again increase.

In the case of beef, the 4.9-per-cent increase for the July period was partly the result of an end to a price war in Montreal and Quebec City. There also was an increase in demand for beef from backyard barbecuers.

The largest part of the 6.8-per-cent increase in pork prices was generated in Toronto, Ottawa and Regina. The department said pork prices should drop in the fall because of increased supplies.

New OPEC meeting on prices?

KUWAIT (AP) — The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries "is likely" to hold an emergency meeting in mid-September to reconsider oil prices if the U.S. dollar continues to decline, the Kuwaiti newspaper Al-Siyassah said Monday.

The paper said OPEC countries have been consulting recently on the need for a meeting because of the latest dollar decline. OPEC oil prices are set in U.S. dollars.

The paper said the contacts were made in light of an OPEC agreement to convene such a meeting if the value of the dollar dropped more than five per cent after the June 28 crude oil price increase decided by OPEC.

The countries concluded the decline has not yet reached five per cent and

Halibut protest supported

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Disgruntled halibut fishermen from British Columbia got the backing Monday of Fisheries Minister Jim McGrath in their demand to be allowed more fish.

McGrath told representatives of the halibut fishermen he would ask for an emergency meeting of the International North Pacific Halibut Commission to consider the fishermen's demand.

The fishermen say the commission cut them off from 300,000 pounds of halibut because of overfishing by Americans off Alaska.

Mike Hunter, a spokesman for McGrath, said the U.S. government is sympathetic to problems posed for the halibut fishermen by American overfishing.

He said after a meeting between the minister and representatives of the fishermen, the Canadian government had told Washington of its concern about the reduction in the Canadian halibut quota.

Hunter said: "We have approached the United States government and told them we consider this a serious problem." He said there had been no official response but the two governments had been discussing the situation.

"We have had some indications that I wouldn't feel free to discuss at the moment. But we understand that the United States government and the fishing industry is sympathetic."

The minister met briefly with Tony Petersen, president of the Pacific Coast Fishing Vessel Owners Guild, and George Hewison, a representative of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union, before they joined department officials.

Officials of the International Pacific Halibut Commission said the meeting proposed by McGrath could come as early as Wednesday. That body is supposed to set quotas that will not deplete the resource.

Genstar hearing Sept. 24

Central Saanich council's subdivision and zoning committee has set Sept. 24 as the date for a public hearing on a proposal to place into a development permit area all the lands owned by Genstar Development Co. at Tod Inlet.

Committee chairman Ald. George MacFarlane said today the permit is being sought to give council more control over any development in the area.

The permit area is the fourth council has drafted since the provincial government created the development permit plan in lieu of land-use contracts which were discarded earlier this year.

Already three areas have been designated in Central Saanich and include Brentwood village, Saanichton village and Turgoose Point.

MacFarlane said the decision to place Genstar's lands in a development permit area in no way means council is about to change its mind on the company's hopes of getting permission to build a 130-housing site on 50 acres west of Wallace Drive.

He said council is as adamant as before that any development would have to conform to current zoning, which allows only recreational and commercial uses such as a resort or convention centre.

The company has said such an undertaking would not be economically viable, and in their proposal to have the zoning changed for a housing development have offered to give the municipality 39 acres as public open space including 19 acres at the head of Ton Inlet and another 20 acres along Tod Creek.

But MacFarlane said the offer is not as good as it might appear on the surface.

He said it would cost about a $1 million to make the waterfront property safe for the public to use. Derelict buildings of the old B.C. Cement plant still stand on the site. The company offered to share the demolition costs which it put at about $100,000.

MacFarlane said council is also opposed to Genstar's proposal because the municipality has more land zoned for residential purposes than its population goals require.

"We are already endangered in becoming considerably larger than we want to be or larger than what the regional board wants us to be."

The Red Baron? No, the Flying Prince

Some odds-makers say one's chances of being hit by lightning are twice as great as the chances of winning a major prize in a lottery. If that's the case, Phil Rock, 56, of Toronto and his wife, Vera, 53, should avoid going outdoors during stormy weather. The Rocks, who won $1 million in a Loto Canada draw in December, 1976, were big winners again in the Provincial lottery draw Sunday, a lottery spokesman said Monday. The couple will share a $1-million prize from the Provincial with 13 relatives and a family friend. Their share of the prize will amount to $400,000.

Meanwhile, Nora Swinford has learned her lesson when it comes to entering contests. The last time she did, she won — and she says she'll never do it again. The 17-year-old newlywed, who lives in Noblesville, Ind., won 60 seconds in the vault of Midwest National Bank in May, courtesy of WIRE radio in Indianapolis. The station had heaped $1 million in small bills on the vault floor, and Mrs. Swinford won all that she could scoop up in one minute. She walked out of the vault with $12,449, and from that moment until the minute she spent the last of her prize, Mrs. Swinford said she was miserable. "I never did care for money," said Mrs. Swinford, who decided her bank total was more trouble than it was worth and gave most of her prize away.

Eighty-year-old Lillian Carter continues to experience "moderate pain" from what is believed to be bursitis in her left shoulder, but the mother of the U.S. president is improving steadily, her doctor said Monday. James Griffith, administrator of Americus-Sumter County Hospital, quoted the physician as saying Mrs. Carter has been increasing her activities since being admitted to hospital last week. "She will remain in hospital for a few more days," he said.

At Benson RAF base in England, Monday, Prince Charles fulfilled a boyhood dream. Clad in silk scarf, goggles and fur-lined flying gear he took the controls of a vintage Tiger Moth biplane and flew flew the 45-year old wood and canvas First World War crate around the sky, looping and doing aerobatic rolls for more than an hour.

When he was a tad of two, Adam Schneider became something of a celebrity in Richmond, Mich., by pushing 40 watermelon seeds into his nose. Some feat. Some nose. Anyway, it took a doctor to extract the seeds and the story got around and Adam was a star. But fame didn't ruin Adam. On Monday his mother, Diane Schneider, disclosed that Adam, now 8, had just had a ball bearing removed from his ear. Mrs. Schneider figures the ball bearing found its way into the ear about six years ago. "We thought he had a hearing problem," she says. Not quite, Mrs. Schneider.

And finally, a former teacher has placed a classified advertisement in a daily newspaper to apologize to former pupils she hit or harshly scolded more than 30 years ago. Jennie Ball, who started teaching in 1940 when she was 19, took out the classified advertisment in the Kingston, Ont., Whig-Standard last week. Now the mother of two adult children, Mrs. Ball said that when she began teaching in a one-room school she didn't understand children.

Christmas husband killer freed

CARDIFF, Wales (UPI) — A woman who stabbed her ex-husband in the heart with a kitchen knife on Christmas Eve and then kicked him as he lay dying has been set free on probation by a judge, who said she was provoked and had suffered enough.

"I have no doubt from the evidence to which I have listened and read that you were, over a period of time, grossly provoked by your late husband to a state which you were no longer able to endure," Justice Tasker Watkins told Catherine Prosser, 27.

The judge ordered Mrs. Prosser released on three years probation Monday after she had pleaded guilty to manslaughter. His decision drew cheers from women's rights supporters in the gallery at Cardiff Crown Court.

"You have been punished enough," the judge said. "You are a good mother and your children need you."

300,000 Chinese in Vietnam war

PEKING (AP) — Chinese officials, divulging a long-secret chapter of the Indochina war, said Monday that Peking sent 300,000 soldiers to Vietnam, including anti-aircraft crews, to help Hanoi defeat the United States. More than 1,000 were killed, they said.

The Vietnamese disputed the figures, however, saying the number of Chinese in Vietnam during the war was "tiny."

The statements came after an acrimonious and fruitless round of peace talks between the two countries. China reminded Vietnam of its past military help in order to underline what it said are its good intentions toward its smaller southern neighbor.

But the negotiations remained at an impasse, each side accusing the other of border provocations and preparing for a new war.

Yang Gongsu, deputy head of the Chinese delegation, said at a news conference following the talks that China had supplied more than 300,000 army personnel to Vietnam between 1964 and 1971. They worked as anti-aircraft artillerymen, road builders, railway workers and logistics teams to keep supply lines open, he said.

If the Chinese were on one-year rotation duty in Vietnam, this means 40,000 or 50,000 would have been there at any one time. At the height of the war, about a half-million U.S. military men were in the Indochina theatre.

More than 1,000 Chinese soldiers were killed and several thousand others were wounded, Yang said. He said the Chinese did not enter South Vietnam, indicating that the casualties were the result of U.S. air raids on the North.

During the war there were persistent reports that unknown numbers of Chinese military advisers and technicians were in North Vietnam. But this was believed to be the first time China has officially acknowledged sending troops to its Communist ally's aid.

It was known at the time that both China and the Soviet Union were pouring material aid into North Vietnam. Yang said the Chinese supplied more than two million guns, more than 270 million rounds of ammunition, 37,000 artillery pieces, 18.8 million artillery shells, 179 aircraft and 145 naval vessels.

The peace talks were begun to try to resolve the disputes between Vietnam and China that led to a brief but bloody border war earlier this year.

Despite the continued bitterness across the negotiating table, both sides indicated they were willing to meet again for a 10th session, the fifth in Peking. No date was set.

Persian Gulf now 'war zone'

LONDON (Reuter) — Lloyd's, the London insurance underwriters, have declared the Persian Gulf a war zone and will cancel existing insurance policies on cargo carried in the area, a Lloyd's official said Monday.

The declaration was due to a prolonged period of war in the area which appeared to be continuing, the official said. Policies with a new war risk premium would have to be taken out, he added.

A British shipping industry source said the insurance market was "a bit edgy" after the U.S. state department's warning of a possible tanker hijack in the Gulf's Strait of Hormuz.

The incident earlier this month off the Caribbean island of Tobago when two supertankers collided and burst into flames had also put insurers into a "jumpy state", the source added. The two tankers were heavily insured on the London market.

About two weeks ago, the U.S. state department alerted ships in the Persian Gulf to a possible hijack attempt. Similar warnings have been issued three or four times in the last five years.

Ship sinks in canal

GAMBOA, Panama Canal Zone (AP) — A freighter sank in the Panama Canal's shipping channel in Gatun Lake after a collision with a Greek vessel, officials reported Monday.

No injuries were reported in the Sunday night accident involving the 110-metre-long Quidnet, registered in the Cayman Islands, and the 140-metre-long Seatide.

Problems of prejudice

It would be naive to assume that the assimiliation of thousands of Vietmanese "boat people" into Canadian society will be an entirely simple process.

The sudden addition of hundreds of new residents to any city would pose problems, problems made more severe by the fact that most of the boat people have no money and don't speak English.

Already there are signs in some U.S. entry points that the system is beginning to break down. Weekend reports told of hundreds of refugees sitting in the San Fransisco airport waiting for sponsors to find them, of families being split up, of refugee agencies so overburdened with work that processing of forms and applications was falling days and weeks behind.

Doubtless some of these same problems will surface in Canada before the thousands of refugees are safely installed. Doubtless too it will take some time — months or even years — before they are fully acclimatized and adjusted to Canadian society and begin making their unique contribution to the Canadian mosiac.

Finding jobs may be a problem for some, although the experience of Vietnamese refugees here in Victoria during the past few months is that they quickly find jobs and become responsible employees. Finding housing at an affordable price may be another problem, especially in centres where low-cost accommodation is already at a premium.

It is not unreasonable for Canadians to express concern about these matters, not unreasonable for them to try to ensure that all levels of government are doing all they can to make the transition as smooth as possible, both for the refugees and their Canadian neighbors.

Those concerns, however, are a far cry from the outpourings of venomous racial hatred that are beginning to follow the arrival of the refugees. The letters expressing the most sickening kinds of prejudice began in Vancouver; they have now spread to Victoria.

Most of the writers do not sign their names. Almost without exception, they express a deep-rooted fear of Canada somehow being "taken over" by persons with another skin color.

Wrote one person, who signed his letter "Mr. Fear O.F. Reprisal:"

"In the future the whites will become the boat people. The Chinese will outpopulate whites and take over Canada. When this is done, they will force whites out of Canada, like they are forcing Chinese out of Vietnam."

Wrote another, whose signature was illegible:

"As a Canadian, I find it my duty to express my views on these boat people or whatever these things are called. . . This island will soon become like England — black. White Canadians will become second class citizens . . . The only ones I believe that want them are Asians themselves and white commie pinkos. Remember. Most people are weak-willed. A strong-willed person can instigate a crowd very fast."

Wrote still a third:

". . . Because we are being forced to accept this current populace of the boat people, then the government should see to it these people are put through a sterilization program so as not to multiply more than what we accepted of the boat people, or we will be overrun by these people in a matter of a few years."

It is obviously useless to point out to these persons the absurd flaws in their logic. Neither logic nor a reasonable assessment of the situation has anything to do with their rage and hostility.

It is, however, important that the rest of the country — the vast majority of Canadians — recognize the total irrationality of these arguments. For it will be only these Canadians who can keep the backlash under control and make the refugee program work.

A violent racist backlash will destroy the program faster than anything else. The dire threats of "racial wars" from the bigots will be fulfilled, not because of the attitude of the immigrants but because of the provocation of the racists.

The government cannot outlaw racist attitudes. The police cannot arrest people for writing inflammatory letters.

Only our communities themselves can show our prejudiced minorities that their attitudes are out of place and unappreciated. By doing that we will have the best chance of overcoming the inherent problems of any refugee problems and proving that the boat people will soon be a great asset to Canada, not a liability.

". . . for all it's worth to you, there may be another recession . . ."

Blacks back off from Carter

Virtually every informed report on what has recently been going on in the Carter administration confirms one point: among the most influential voices in its policy councils is that of Rosalynn Carter. She may be the most powerful First Lady since Edith Bolling Wilson virtually took over for a stricken president.

Other presidents' wives — notably Eleanor Roosevelt and Lady Bird Johnson — undoubtedly carved out important areas of action for themselves. But what other First Lady would have been sent, as Mrs. Carter was this week, to address such a politically important group as the National Urban League?

No doubt her speech was written by the same people who would have written one for President Carter. But in this appearance and in a similar one before the National Governors' Conference, Mrs. Carter appeared as an administration spokesman. Plainly Carter and his advisers thought she would be more impressive than one of the surviving cabinet officers.

By his side

Mrs. Carter was one of the major influences in the drastic change of direction the president finally consented to impose on his administration.

Editors, columnists and television anchormen who were invited to Camp David just before the president's July 15 speech saw Rosalynn Carter side by side with Jimmy Carter at the head of the briefing table.

Dinner guests at the White House have seen her interrupt the president — not rudely but unhesitatingly — usually to explain something more clearly than he had been doing. In such groups or in private conversation, her forcefulness is evident.

Mrs. Carter seems to be functioning not only as a spokesman on important occasions but as a high level adviser, much as a secretary of state or a special assistant to the president might. If so, these roles make her an important figure in the administration in quite a different sense from any other active First Lady.

Even so, at her Urban League appearance, Mrs. Carter apparently failed to persuade Vernon Jordan, the organization's president, of the virtues of the Carter administration. Scarcely had she finished outlining what she said were its accomplishments than Jordan declared it "premature for blacks to jump on any politician's bandwagon for 1980."

He was so right. Despite the record Mrs. Carter cited, blacks do not owe much gratitude to this administration, particularly in comparison to what Carter seemed to be promising in 1976 and in view of the importance of the black vote to his victory that year.

The president has not appointed a single black to what could be described as a top-level policy-making position. Patricia R. Harris, moving from housing to health, education and welfare, will be as close as any black has come to such eminence. Andrew Young at the UN has made something of his office through his own personality and prominence, not by its inherent power. But when the administration's major economic and social decisions have been made, they have been made — as always before — by whites.

Those decisions have not come close to meeting the expectations of blacks. Now, with the GNP having slumped by 3.3 percent last quarter, the nation is heading into a recession that almost surely will be longer and deeper than the administration has predicted — and even administration figures project 6.6 percent unemployment by the end of 1979. That would put another one million people out of work this year, and blacks can be in little doubt about who will be the first fired.

Low income persons — a description that includes a lot of blacks — suffer greatly from continuing inflation. And unless congress goes along with Carter's proposals for reimbursing the poor from the pending windfall tax for rises in oil and gasoline prices, they will be hard hit by those increases. None of this seems likely to cause much enthusiasm among blacks for re-electing Jimmy Carter.

They like Teddy

At the same time, the appeal of Sen. Edward Kennedy may be more strongly felt in the black community than anywhere outside the ranks of old Camelot hands. His brothers are widely regarded as martyrs and he as their heir. He would no doubt get heavy black support for a presidential bid.

But Jordan's warning applies here, too, or should. It is not clear that for all his liberalism Edward Kennedy knows what to do about stagflation and energy, or could get a major urban program through congress. For that matter, it is not clear that he can win the Democratic nomination without splitting the party and threatening a Republican victory.

It is not even clear that Kennedy intends to run, in which case premature black support for him could hardly improve blacks' welcome at a Carter White House where Rosalynn Carter, among others, is putting new emphasis on loyalty. And anyway, political wisdom dictates, as Vernon Jordan put it, that black support ought to be "earned with ironclad commitments to the programs and policies that black people need." If 1976 didn't prove that, nothing ever will.

Winds of change in Ottawa

OTTAWA — If you are a woman or a francophone, and preferably if you are both, get yourself to Ottawa as quickly as you can if you're interested in a job that in return for inhumanly-long hours offers a high salary and high psychic income, meaning status and satisfaction.

Last week Prime Minister Joe Clark called in his cabinet ministers one by one to ask what they thought of their top civil servants, both deputy ministers and agency heads. "Some (ministers) said they were very happy; others said they were not so happy," reports an insider.

After his special cabinet meeting in Jasper National Park at the end of August, Clark will announce what will be, almost certainly, the most sweeping shuffle of civil service mandarins in years. In effect, Clark will be stamping his own image upon his government for the first time. Look for a lot of changes, with the most dramatic ones occurring in finance and in federal-provincial relations.

Committed to women

First, though, about females and francophones. To signal his determination to advance francophones, Clark's first appointment was of Marcel Masse to the top-most rank of privy council clerk. He's as committed to the cause of women. "About two-thirds of his memos to me say, somewhere, 'find me women'," says ex-MP Jean Pigott, now Clark's aide for human resources, which means appointments and patronage.

Clark's problem is that he is about to lose the most where he can afford to lose the least. Sylvia Ostry, chairman of the Economic Council, plans to leave next year for a post with the Organization of Economic Cooperation and Development in Paris. Maurice LeClair, secretary of the Treasury Board, has announced he will move to Canadian National Railways while Jacques Des Roches, deputy minister of supply, soon will leave to join the Air Industries Association.

No word is out about fresh francophones. Two women that Clark's people have their sights on are Reva Gerstein, a Toronto businesswoman and former chairman of the party policy committee, and Pat Carney, a Vancouver management consultant and a defeated candidate.

These triple departures at least will make it easier for Clark to move his other mandarins among the musical chairs. Three other seats may become empty. Gordon Robertson, the most senior of the mandarins, now secretary for federal-provincial relations, plans to retire this fall. Bud Drury, an ex-Liberal minister now chairman of National Capital Commission, has let it be known he'd like to step down after finishing his special study on reorganizing the government of the Northwest Territories. And communications deputy minister Bernard Ostry is considering an outwards move.

Among the mandarins in the ascendant, there's at least one major surprise. Before the election, Clark's aides happily rattled off to reporters a "hit list" of civil servants that included, fairly near the top, the deputy minister of energy, Ian Stewart. Stewart earlier had been chief economic aide to Pierre Trudeau and the intellectual inspiration for Trudeau's "New Society" speech.

JEAN PIGGOT
. . . Clark's talent scout

Today these same Clark aides compete to praise Stewart. "Absolutely irreplaceable," says one. "A-plus, the only one I'd give out," says another.

Stewart made his mark by giving Clark the lines he delivered so well during the Tokyo summit conference. So have, besides Masse, a couple of other Tokyo Summiteers — Allan Gotlieb and Bob Johnstone, both from external affairs.

So much for the good news for the mandarins. "We need ventilation at the top; some fresh people with fresh approaches and fresh ideas," says a top Clark aide. (Back in 1968, Trudeau, you may recall, called for "new guys with new ideas.")

A strong breeze is likely to hit the finance department. Deputy minister Bill Hood, although highly regarded as an economist, is judged, apparently, as lacking the forcefulness needed to wrestle our financing problems to the ground.

If Hood goes — perhaps as ambassador to the OECD — he may be replaced by an outsider. Amid the buzz, two names pop out: Grant Reuber, chief economist at the Bank of Montreal and Tom Kierans, a partner with Pitfield, MacKay, Ross in Toronto and chairman of the Ontario Economic Council, a post Reuber held before him.

The winds of change will blow over federal-provincial relations as well. Robertson, because of his seniority, reported directly to Trudeau. His successor will serve Federal-Provincial Relations Minister Bob Jarvis. As well, the national unity shop, headed by Paul Tellier, until now an independent empire, will be merged into the regular department.

Only grudges

If you glance back over this list, you may notice, to your surprise, that it contains no "hits". ("There never was a hit list, only a grudge list which after 16 years you'll have to allow us," explains an insider.) In fact, you can take bets on one "hit" — Air Canada chairman Bryce Mackasey.

The late August-early September shuffle won't be the last of Clark's changes. Pigott has assembled a talent bank of 600 potential "super heavies" as she calls them, whom Clark and his ministers can consider for permanent senior posts or for short-term contracts.

"The words the PM uses to tell me what he wants are 'able' and 'panoramic'," says Pigott. "By 'able' he means, obviously, able, that is the 1980 equivalent of the wartime dollar-a-year men. By 'panoramic' he means that I've got to look for people in places they haven't been looked for before, like northern Quebec and northern Ontario." But in his panorama, Clark most of all wants francophones and women.

Community groups

Following the recent publicity surrounding Mr. Barry Mayhew's remarks regarding our local economy, I would like to clear up a few matters regarding neighborhood groups.

These associations are not formed to oppose development just for the sake of it nor do they have the power that Mr. Wheaton, in his letter of July 20, would have us believe.

Community associations are usually formed by concerned residents who see the area in which they have a lifetime investment threatened by developers, many of whom do not live there and do not have the slightest conscience about exploiting the land as long as they make a profit. These community groups deserve respect, as does anyone who voluntarily spends many, many hours of their own time towards the improvement of their community.

Mr. Wheaton is correct when he says that there is suspicion directed towards those in the community (in the broader sense) who are prepared to risk their own money in order to create jobs and make a profit at the same time. First, they have the money to risk and second, their motive is profit and not creating jobs. Homeowners who are motivated to get involved in the democratic process and take an interest in local developments do not have such money to risk and besides, when they don't participate they are labelled as apathetic.

Mr. Geddes, in his letter of July 21, makes the point that with sensible planning and common sense improvements can be made by further development. I could agree, but isn't it common sense to first listen to the people who live in the proposed areas? Too often planners and engineers develop areas without taking into account the interests of those living there and that is why opposition develops.

If these developments are so essential then homeowners should be richly compensated for loss of property and the drop in values. This is never the case. Sensible planning should involve neighborhood groups when it affects them.

Many community associations are involved in positive and constructive activities, be they Hallowe'en bonfires for children or input into local area plans. It is time that municipalities and community associations started working together for a change instead of against each other, in an atmosphere of co-operation not confrontation, for the benefit of all and not the individual. — Graham Hunter, President, Royal Oak Community Association.

2,4-D in Victoria

We are writing to you to alert the citizens of Victoria and particularly James Bay where we live and work regarding city council's decision to spray 2,4-D around the city to control dandelions.

We have always regarded letters to the paper as a last resort, but over the past few months we have discussed our concerns, as have several community groups, with Ald. John Hayes, but he seems adamant that the spraying of 2,4-D is not a significant health hazard.

2,4-D is a phenoxy herbicide which basically interferes with the plant growth at the cellular level. As one scientist noted: "It kills like cancer, it so disrupts plant growth." In the concentration to which residents of Victoria wll be exposed, we do not predict an immediate effect. It is the long term exposure to low doses that has potential to produce chronic health problems such as cancer, spontaneous abortion and fetal abnormalities that concern us.

There have already been disastrous results with the use of phenoxy herbicides such as the exposure of the Vietnamese to the American defoliant Agent Orange, which is a 50/50 mixture of 2,4-D and 2,4,5-T. The Vietnamese have noted increased incidence of liver cancer, abortions and fetal abnormalities. At the present, 2,4-D is under review by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. The British Columbia Medical Association's environmental health committee has publicly stated that monitoring of the long range effects of herbicides and other environmental chemicals is totally inadequate at the present time. Until all the evidence is in, a moratorium on 2,4-D spraying should come in to effect.

All is not wrong at city hall though. They are attempting to produce a handbook on precautions to take in the private use of 2,4-D. They are to be commended on this initiative but we feel that this seems to conflict with their public action.

If the public also is concerned over 2,4-D spraying, then they should contact city hall and in particular, Ald. John Hayes, or any of the aldermen who voted in favor of 2,4-D spraying (that is: Ald. Hayes, Wright, Tindall and McKenzie and Mayor Young). Municipal elections are coming up in November and we are sure these aldermen will be slightly more susceptive to public opinion than they may be at other times. — Derek W. Carroll, M.D., Richard Hudson, M.D. 435 Simcoe Street.

There's no future in crystal balls

THE GLOBE AND MAIL
An Editorial

You couldn't say that [illegible] St. John was a quack among psychics. She held, after all, the impeccable credentials of a graduate of the Arthur Ford Academy of Mediumship (a full three days of study for $250), and an unquestioned skill in placing a prediction where it would have the greatest dramatic impact.

Niagara Falls has spectacle, thunder, mist, and a sense of the enormous power of the forces of nature. Mrs. St. John added a prospective rockfall, shrewdly specifying a particular hour and minute of a particular day. Thousands of people, naturally, turned out to watch.

It would be difficult to say what they were watching for — the rockfall, the failure of the rock to fall, or possibly the violent demise of those rash enough to ignore the gypsy's warning. At any rate, nothing collapsed but the seer's reputation.

That's the trouble with the crystal ball business; there's no future in it. And yet this is only partly true. The fact is that, for all of their dismally poor batting average, psychics can still pull us out (or take us in) to watch for some spectacular fulfilment of their latest prediction. How many times has the world been about to end, only to disappoint us all by continuing?

* * *

It seems that we recover very quickly from the discouragement of faulty forecasting. We must be propelled on to the next disillusionment by a positive urge to find one that will oblige by coming true. Most of us would be thrilled by evidence of psychic infallibility — though there are exceptions, one being the priest on the Maid of the Mist who was actually heard to say that his faith had been rewarded by the failure of the rocks to fall.

Was he even mildly surprised that they didn't? Why was he there, challenging odds that he didn't believe in? Maybe for reasons that were not too different from those of the crowds that flocked to the scene for the countdown. A chance to be where the inaction was. Just to share in a happening.

Although there was a gratifying influx of visitors to Niagara Falls, the prediction was blamed for a decrease in the volume of passengers on board the Maid of the Mist. Donald McHenry, regional director for the New York Division of Tourism, and much concerned with advertising the region's attractions, was a man baffled by the vagaries of human behavior. "I can't understand how something like this could have more impact than our $10-million program," he mourned.

Odd. Very odd. And it reminds us of what we read in the tea leaves at breakfast the other morning. An uncanny simulation of the CN tower collapsing all over the railway tracks at 10:32 a.m. on the morning of. . .

15 million die of hunger each year

Millions of children suffer as global poverty worsens

By GEOFFREY LEAN

ROME — One-fifth of the people of the world live below the poverty line, and their plight will rapidly become very much worse unless urgent action is taken.

This stark message is contained in reports before a top-level UN conference which opened here last month to try to rescue the poorest of the poor.

The conference is analyzing the failure of development to reach the poor in the past 20 years, and is addressing itself to the politically explosive issue of how to channel more wealth and power to them from rich countries and from the wealthy minority in poor ones.

Edouard Saouma, director-general of FAO, the Food and Agriculture Organization which is organizing the conference, describes the plight of the most wretched as "below the margins of human existence."

"The only wealth they have is of privation and disease — the oedema of famine, kwashiorkor, malaria, sleeping sickness, blindness," he said when he opened the conference.

"Their struggle to survive, to collect a few twigs to cook a handful of grain, is less dramatic in media terms than the quarrels of car-owners queueing for a few litres of petrol. But it is of far greater consequence for the life of nations and the peaceful future of our children."

Eight hundred million people are destitute, say the conference papers, and they are getting hungrier although food production is growing faster than population.

Fifteen million children under the age of five die every year, at least partly as a result of malnutrition. Ten million more children are paralyzed, struck blind or deaf, or suffer permanent brain damage or stunted growth as a result of disease.

Chronic ill-health is increasing. Housing conditions are getting worse. At least half of all Third World children never enter primary school.

The plight of the poor has two main causes. First, rich countries have failed to give developing nations a better deal in world trade: the reports say that the terms of trade have worsened during the 1970s.

Second, in almost every Third World country the poor are getting poorer while the rich get richer. This is happening in fertile countries as well as barren ones, in nations that have achieved spectacular growth rates and those that have not. Even in Bangladesh, where average incomes have fallen, the rich have still managed to increase their wealth.

The conference discussions are technical and the title — the World Conference on Agrarian Reform and Rural Development — uninspiring. But at it's heart is one of the most sensititive of all issues, the ownership and distribution of land.

The poor are poor because they have no land or too little of it. At the last count, 97 per cent of the world's farmers had only a quarter of its farmland to share between them.

Fifty-four million farming families try to subsist on less than two acres; 100 million are now tenants, usually with no security and having to give half their produce to their landlords; 75 million are landless laborers.

But, as the experts here are stressing, land reform is only a start. It must be followed through with credit, technical assistance, education and industry.

The conference has before it proposals for ending severe malnutrition and bringing everyone up to a minimum income by the end of the century. But their implementation depends on the will of individual governments, and the omens are not good.

For example, the proposals stop short of calling clearly for land reform, since most of the governments that make up the delegations pay little more than lip-service to the concept.

China's youth without jobs too

By MARK GAYN
Toronto Star

One day in May, the municipal government in Nanking advertised for young people who wanted to be trained as barbers. What the startled city fathers got was a stampede, with more than 2,500 applicants.

A test was given and 578 youths who had "good moral, intellectual and physical qualifications" were selected. After six months of training, they will be given a "technical" examination, and those who pass it will become barbers.

One reason the city fathers were willing to take in so many applicants was that, during the Cultural Revolution, people tended to neglect their appearance, and some barbershops simply closed doors. In this city of 1,700,000, there were only 175 barbershops left with 1,700 barbers — one for each 1,000 of population.

But an even more pressing reason was the fact that Nanking, like all the other major cities in the land, is awash with unemployed people, most of them young. The Nanking city fathers were simply creating jobs.

No one knows the scale of China's unemployment — but the subject is no longer taboo. In a talk before senior officials in Peking, one of the vice-premiers was quoted as saying that China has 20 million unemployed, half in the cities and half in the countryside. Newspapers in the three great cities, Peking, Shanghai and Tientsin, now carry frequent reports on how this or that neighborhood had created jobs for most — though never for all — of its unemployed young. The painful subject is raised at party meetings, both in the capital and in the provinces.

To give credit where it is due, the government of Hua Guofeng and Deng Xiaoping is the first in 30 years even to admit massive unemployment. The problem, of course, existed before too. When Mao Tse-tung sent upwards of 12 million youngsters to the countryside, he insisted it was merely to have them "re-educated by the middle and poor peasants." The truth was that the industry was not growing fast enough to provide jobs for all the graduates being turned out by the high schools and universities.

By sharp contrast, the new government believes it need not deceive itself and the public. On this problem, as on the state of the economy, education and dogma, it has been remarkably candid.

Thus, Hua himself told the People's Congress in June that "the people waiting for work outnumber the available jobs," and "the government is very much concerned about their employment and livelihood."

Not surprisingly, Peking's solutions are much like those of Washington in the depression '30s. Franklin Roosevelt had the unemployed build roads, rake leaves in parks and (those who could), paint murals and write guidebooks. Now Hua urges the officials to develop "handicrafts and repair services, service trades, fish breeding and poultry farming, restaurants, tourism, parks and public gardening . . . so that those waiting for jobs can be gradually and suitably placed."

He told the Congress the government hoped to create 7 million such jobs by the year's end. And, "in due course," all the job-seekers would find a place in "vocational training or labor service."

As for us in the West, so for China the problem is made more acute by the economic slump. Late last year, the government found that its planners, in their zeal to see the nation boom, provided for much faster growth than the lean treasury could afford. As a result, this spring the decision was made to retrench. And this, inevitably, has led to a sharp cut in available jobs.

All this, of course, bears a heavy social price tag. The men who govern China are actually aware of this, and there are endless appeals to the party network to keep an eye on the morale and morals of the "confused" young.

The truth is in fiction

By ROBERT FULFORD

Someone once pointed out that as you grow into middle age you begin to perceive the dangerous outlines of a truth that is both appalling and reassuring — that there is no such thing as a grown-up person.

That calm sense of maturity that you once thought belonged to older people never comes to you. At some moment you realize that it has also eluded your friends. Sooner or later you discover that no one — literally no one — possesses it, because it doesn't exist.

Writers can tell us all about this. In a sense it is their business to tell us about it because it is their business to tell us about themselves. In the process of their work, if they are serious, they reveal not only what they think of the world but how they exist in their own minds.

* * *

This kind of revelation sets serious writers apart from the rest of humanity; it also creates the myth of the irrational, immature poet or novelist. That well loved myth is a lie — not because it unfairly depicts the writers but because it implies that non-writers are different.

In fact, the difference is that writers reveal their rage, their jealousy, their feelings of impotence and terror. The rest of us hide those feelings and tell each other we are mature, objective, emotionally honest.

A bank clerk, or a bank president for that matter, may suffer from childish fantasies, may live half his internal life in a pitiful dream of frustrated infantile omnipotence. No one need know: his businss life, perhaps even his private life, can be conducted within rules that prohibit the revelation of personal feelings. Unless he reaches some crisis in his emotional being, he'll forever hide his inadequacy from the rest of us.

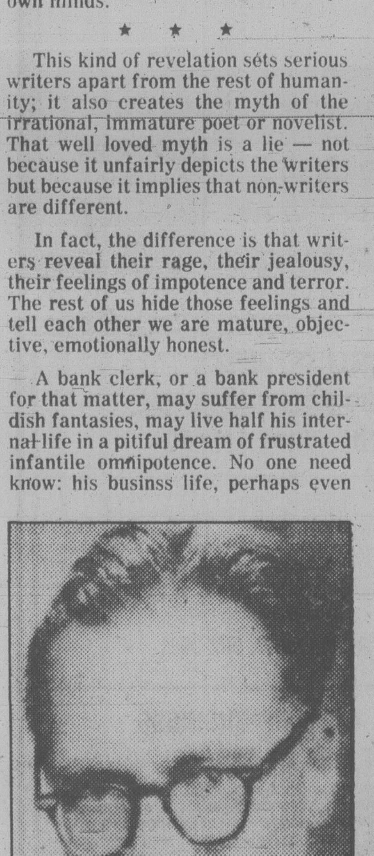
A politician may suffer from paranoid feelings of rejection, may believe without good reason that the world has treated him shamefully. A teacher, because of some crippling experience in youth, may go through life resenting or even hating women, and punishing in secret ways all those he knows.

* * *

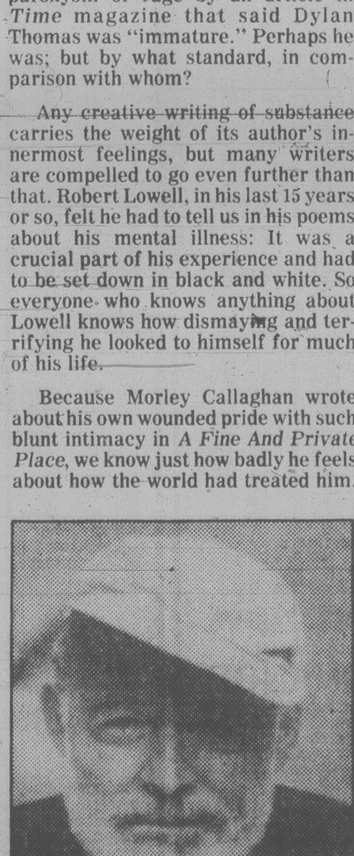
But let any of these persons become a writer and the truth will emerge in all its squalor. I was once thrown into a paroxysm of rage by an article in Time magazine that said Dylan Thomas was "immature." Perhaps he was; but by what standard, in comparison with whom?

Any creative writing of substance carries the weight of its author's innermost feelings, but many writers are compelled to go even further than that. Robert Lowell, in his last 15 years or so, felt he had to tell us in his poems about his mental illness: It was a crucial part of his experience and had to be set down in black and white. So everyone who knows anything about Lowell knows how dismaying and terrifying he looked to himself for much of his life.

Because Morley Callaghan wrote about his own wounded pride with such blunt intimacy in A Fine And Private Place, we know just how badly he feels about how the world had treated him.



LOWELL . . . 'terrifying'



HEMINGWAY . . . muddled?

We know that Leonard Cohen sees himself as a pitiful victim in the war of the sexes — we know because Cohen has felt called upon to tell us.

Norman Mailer, by making himself the central figure in so much of his later work, has forced himself to look clearly — in public — at his failure to meet his own demands as a writer and a man.

But it's too painful for some of us to acknowldge that writers are telling us about the human condition when they tell us about themselves. We have to defend ourselves against that harsh a truth. So journalists and academics conspire in a plot to set the writers apart, to see them as freaks. Not like us at all.

My daughter pointed out to me a passage of just that kind in her Grade 13 textbook, A Short History Of The American Nation (Harper & Row, 1975), by John A. Garraty. I have no knowledge of Garraty but I now know what he thinks about F. Scott Fitzgerald, Ernest Hemingway, and H.L. Mencken. He thinks they were immature.

Fitzgerald's This Side Of Paradise, he tells us, is "somwhat sophomoric," and Fitzgerald, "pleasure-loving and extravagant . . . descended into the despair of alcholism." That takes care of him.

* * *

As for Hemingway: "Despite his carefully controlled prose, he was an unabashed, rather muddled romantic, an adolescent emotionally." So much for Hemingway.

As for Mencken, his work, "while amusing,' was "not, of course, very profound . . . like both Fitzgerald and Hemingway, he was something of a perennial adolescent."

Whereas, one is left to assume, John A. Garraty and his friends and colleagues — not to mention the teachers and students who read his odious remarks — are mature, calm and thoughtful, and will never in their lives write anything unjudicious or sophomoric.

The bookstores this season — as for some seasons past — are crammed with non-fiction books that will instruct you on how to achieve maturity of various kinds, how to move through difficult passages in your life and reach serenity. They were all written by Garraty's spiritual brothers and sisters, people who claim to have found the truth and are ready to pass it on.

They are all lies. The truth, as always, is to be found in the fiction.

Today's Markets

Toronto

Eight of the 14 stock groups declined, with the largest drop in oil and gas. Management companies led the six gainers.

Trading was halted at the opening in shares of Simpsons Ltd. pending the outcome of a shareholders meeting. The stock last traded at $3.65.

Trading was halted at 11:50 a.m. in shares of United Canadian Shares Ltd. but resumed trading at 12:45 p.m. Dominion Tanners Ltd. said it bought 333,000 shares of United Canadian at an undisclosed price to bring its holdings to 52 per cent. No further stock purchases are planned.

Vancouver

Prices were down in heavy trading today on the Vancouver Stock Exchange. Volume to 10:50 a.m. was 2,654,306 shares.

Daon Development led trading on the industrials, down ⅜ at $16 on 5,700 shares. Hal Roach Studios was unchanged at 4.20 on 1,900, Ambassador was unchanged at .61 on 1,575 and Balco was unchanged at $16.½ on 1,500. Gregory was unchanged at $6½ and Grouse Mountain was up .05 at .75.

On the resource and development board, Saxton was unchanged at $2.30 on 617,358, Andex Mines was unchanged at .29 on 122,000, North Hart Resources was unchanged at .34 on 57,000 and Rio Plata Silver was down .14 at 100 on 34,100.

New York

The stock market staged a strong advance today as the dollar strengthened and the price of gold fell.

Gainers led losers by more than a 2-to-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

London

Industrials and banks firmed while golds eased and oils were mixed.

Canadian shares were also mixed.

Business briefs

Oil deal in the works

VANCOUVER (CP) — A spokesman for a Denver-based oil company which a Vancouver businessman wants to take over in a half-billion dollar deal has said the deal has not yet been completed.

Earlier, The Canadian Press had reported that the takeover bid by J. A. (Bob) Carter of Hamilton Brothers Petroleum Corp. had been closed.

The spokesman from the firm's Calgary office said that reports that the deal is complete were premature.

"It should go through in a week," the spokesman said, indicating the deal has not fallen through altogether.

Port contracts awarded

VANCOUVER (CP) — Contracts totalling more than $1 million have been awarded to two Vancouver area companies for work at the Port of Vancouver, the federal transport ministry has announced.

A $756,435 contract for repaving of the Centennial Terminal container yard was awarded to Winvan Paving Ltd., of Burnaby, while a $336,325 contract was awarded to Merchant Contractors Ltd., of Vancouver for demolition of a grain elevator.

The ministry said material from the elevator will be used as landfill for a roadway between Ballantyne and Centennial terminals, resulting in substantial cost-savings to the port.

Businessmen pessimistic

OTTAWA (CP) — Fewer businessmen are optimistic about their short-term prospects than three months ago, a Statistics Canada survey shows.

The federal agency released its quarterly survey of business conditions showing 23 per cent of the 6,700 manufacturers questioned anticipate a fall in production in the third quarter. A similar survey taken in April showed 12 per cent expected a drop in their production.

The survey showed 26 per cent expected to increase production in the next quarter, compared with 32 per cent in the previous survey.

Businessmen cited shortages of raw material and skilled labor as the greatest impediments to production.

Telcom takeover seen

TORONTO (CP) — Control of Northern Telecom Ltd., the largest telecommunications manufacturer in Canada, could pass into American hands by the early 1980s, says a recent report by Northern Business Intelligence of Toronto.

The report predicts that Northern Telecom will make a big sales push in the United States market and will acquire U.S. firms in the process. "Many of these will be equity financed and the newly-issued shares will be owned by Americans."

Northern Telecom is based in Montreal.

It is controlled by Bell Canada which holds an estimated 61 per cent of the common stock.

Housing starts drop

OTTAWA (CP) — The rate of housebuilding during the first half of the year was down 13 per cent from 1978 levels, Statistics Canada figures show.

The federal agency has released figures showing that housing starts for the first six months of the year were running at an annual level of 135,000. This compared with 155,000 for the corresponding period last year.

By the end of June, 67,316 new housing units — single homes, attached homes or apartments — had been started.

Building starts in June totalled 14,352. This compared with a June, 1978, total of 16,214 units.

Cuba sugar harvest up

HAVANA (Reuter) — Cuba produced 7.99 million tons of sugar during its 1978-79 cane harvest, President Fidel Castro announced.

This is an increase of 641,000 tons over the previous year's output and the highest Cuban production in a normal harvest. The only time it has been exceeded was in 1969-70, when 8.5 million tons were produced after mass mobilization of workers which seriously disrupted the rest of the economy.

Sugar makes up some 85 per cent of this country's exports. Much of it is sold to the Soviet Union at preferential prices.

Student today criminal tomorrow

TORONTO (UPC) — The clever computer science student of today may be the wily computer criminal of tomorrow. And professors are worried about it.

"Computer crime is the single greatest growth area today and there is every reason to believe not only are the skills required to participate in computer crime learned at university, but the attitudes as well," said Dr. John Carroll.

A professor at the University of Western Ontario in London, Ont., Carroll said a survey he conducted is an accurate reflection of computer abuse.

The survey of about 70 third and fourth-year computer science students at the end of the last academic year indicated 34 per cent tried to obtain computer time without paying, 34 per cent tried to break the security system and 24 per cent used passwords picked up from other students.

Charge laid in break-in

An 18-year-old youth was to appear in provincial court today charged with breaking into the Coach and Four Restaurant in Bastion Square Sunday and stealing about $1,800.

He was arrested by police who stopped and questioned him at Douglas and Humboldt early this morning and found he was carrying a quantity of money.

$ decline helps B.C. firms

VANCOUVER (CP) - Two British Columbia firms today reported a large jump in earnings attributed in part to the weakness of the Canadian dollar

British Columbia Forest Products Ltd. announced that net earnings for the first half of 1979 were $48.6 million or $3.19 a share compared with $29.7 million or $1.95 a share for the same period last year.

And Bethlehem Copper Corp. has reported second-quarter net revenues up by more than three times from the corresponding period last year.

Earnings were $1,677,00 or 26.5 cents a share compared with $622,000 or 9.8 cents a share in the second quarter of 1978.

The price was a drop of more than two cents a pound from the first quarter, but the company said this was a seasonal variation and that prices soon would swing upward again.

BCFP said in a news release sales were $382.6 million compared with $331.0 million during the corresponding period in 1978.

The company credits stronger prices, particularly for pulp and overseas lumber, as well as the devalued Canadian dollar for the large over-all increase in earnings.

Angry blacks rake Thatcher

Shridath Ramphal, secretary general of the conference, told reporters today that he did not not expect the conference to produce any "magical plan" to solve the issue, although he conceded it would likely dominate the behind-the-scenes discussions.

"What we must hope is that in the consultations (there) will emerge convergences of view," Ramphal said, adding that the commonwealth leaders would "not get it altogether" at the meeting behing held in this frontline capital only 80 km. from the Rhodesian border.

Speaking in the Cameroonian capital of Yaounde, Canadian Prime Minister Clark said Monday he is convinced that a moderate approach to the Zimbabwe-Rhodesia question would be adopted by most countries.

If a solution acceptable to all is to be found, delegates at the meeting must not become prisoners of rhetoric, he told a news conference.

Clark pours aid

YAOUNDE, Cameroon (UPC) — After being greeted in the Cameroon capital by 100,000 cheering, dancing citizens and seeing his portrait hung from every lamp post, it would have been very difficult for Prime Minister Joe Clark — who has promised to hold the line on government spending — to take a tough stand on foreign aid to Cameroon. He didn't.

In a joint communique signed Monday by Clark and Cameroonian President Ahmadou Ahidjo, the prime minister "confirmed the willingness of his government to maintain and, as much as possible, step up its assistance to Cameroon's development efforts."

Among a series of aid programs announced Monday were:

— A $16.7 million loan and a $4 million grant from the Canadian International Development Agency to help finance a project to give some 50 communities in south-central Cameroon electric power;

— A $2.7 million grant to the Cameroon water and forests agency to strengthen the country's ability to manage and control its forest resource industry;

— $100,000 from CIDA to help Alcan Afrique, a subsidiary of Alcan Canada, investigate establishing an aluminum industry in Cameroon.

The grants and loans, coupled with ongoing railroad and port development, bring Canadian aid next year up to about the same level as last year's record $16.7 million.

Rupert project on

OTTAWA (CP) — Transport Minister Don Mazankowski announced today construction is expected to start next year on a new multi-million dollar grain terminal in Prince Rupert.

Possible sites include one on Ridley Island and one on Kaien Island.

Mazankowski called a press conference after he and Agriculture Minister John Wise signed a memorandum of understanding with Cargill Canada Ltd., United Grain Growers, Alberta Wheat Pool, Pioneer Grain and the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool — the consortium that will build the facility that could cost $125 million.

Ottawa will share the costs of preparing the site and will improve existing CN Railway tracks. Alberta is expected to play a major role in the financing construction.

TOWN TALK

Bookworms and staff of the central public library downtown who were looking forward to moving, at long last, into larger and modern quarters in the new B.C. government building on Broughton will have to wait a little longer.

The move to the red brick Alfred Waddington building (an apt name for a building housing the library; he wrote the first book published in B.C. 120 years ago) was scheduled for October. However, there's still a lot of work to be done before the books can be reshelved and moving day has been pushed back again.

"The B.C. Buildings Corp. is still working on the building," said a library spokesman. Construction was held up while the four core municipalities wrangled among themselves and with the province over rent.

Tentatively, the library will relocate early in 1980, "possibly February."

Howard In Particular is a 14 minute film about a man's nightmarish loss of imagination as he attends his simulated retirement party at the Cocktail Fruit Factory. The company, where the man has been a banana slicer, is so big that they can't hold real retirement parties.

The film was directed by Atom Egoyan of Victoria and won a first in the scenario category of the Canadian National Exhibition Film Festival.

Everybody loves a parade, especially the children of Victoria bus driver Andy Burgess.

"They wanted to see so many of them I decided it would be easier if we just joined the parade ourselves."

That's how he and Penny McKay, another bus driver, got involved in the Great Inner Tube Race where, as the Transit Tubers, they won first prize in the parade's mixed entry category, edging Bernie's Fried Chicken.

"There's never any shortage of children for our float," Burgess said. "There were three of mine and three of hers and a couple of other youngsters from the neighborhood."

The children help prepare the float and they get to do most of the waving. They were in the Oak Bay Tea Party parade and at Esquimalt's Buccaneer Days before appearing in the Great Inner Tube Race parade on Sunday.

It will be a happy occasion for Frances Walker Wednesday when she celebrates her 100th birthday with her friends at the Gorge Road Hospital. Her two daughters, Kathleen McCutcheon and Edith Arthur will be present.

She was born in the English Lake District, Lake Windermere, Westmoreland, where they say centenarians are not unusual. She and her husband, who has predeceased her, came to Canada in 1907 and lived in Qu'Appele, Sask., before moving to Vancouver and then Victoria.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. J.O. Thomas:

Your son, Peter Thomas, is in Hong Kong and doing well and he has written to you.

But he addressed his letter to J.O. Thomas, 2344, Oak Bay, Victoria. And there's no such place.

She would like Mr. and Mrs. Thomas to contact her, especially because the letter contains a number of photos.

"It is quite a coincidence because my initials are J.O. and I have a son named Peter but the letter is not from my son. I hope Town Talk can help me to find Mr. and Mrs. Thomas."

She can be reached at 383-2519.

"Holy blazing barstool, Batman. Do you think it could have been deliberate?"

"It's hard to say, Boy Wonder. The folks at the Douglas Hotel and the Victoria Fire Department just can't be sure.

But early Saturday, someone smelled smoke in the hotel cocktail lounge and called the fire department. Firefighters finally found the fire in the foam atop a barstool.

"Must have been a good party Friday night, Batman."

Who was Wolcott?

He was the second son of John Wolcott of Tolland, Somersetshire, England, who emigrated to the United States in 1630, settling first in Dorsetshire, Mass., and later Windsor, Conn.

He served on the Committee of Twelve in Connecticut's first general assembly in 1637 and was elected a member of the House of Magistrates (Senate) in 1643. He was annually re-elected during his lifetime.

Two-hundred descendants formed a society in 1907 at Warren, Ohio, to keep his name alive.

The Laurel Point Inn get-together will be the first reunion to be held in Canada.

Betty Wolcott George, 2115 Central, will be the hostess.

Her brother, Don Wolcott of Calgary, PetroCan vice-president, will speak and show slides of sites in Canada named after Wolcott.

Little Leaguer Chad Lumley will meet big leaguers Bruce Bochte and Danny Meyer, Seattle Mariners fielders, at their home game Friday in a special trip arranged by Victoria supporters.

The eight-year-old Saanich boy suffered severe injuries in a parking lot accident a year ago and has undergone a series of operations that are hoped to restore 30 per cent use of his arm.

Part of the medical expense was provided by a benefit concert by the B-Jay Roberts and VI Country band, who will be on the dockside as Chad and his mother sail aboard Princess Marguerite.

Trixie keeps those sheep on the lamb

By PAUL MINVIELLE
Times Staff

The small black dog was a blur as she streaked across the brown grass, up one side of the sloping field and beyond four nervous sheep.

A whistle from the dog's owner sent her in a wide arc, bringing her in behind the sheep, and a second later they were running.

The dog was Trixie, this year's Canadian novice champion, and at sheepdog trials on Salt Spring Island on the weekend, she showed off her winning form for some 1,200 fans who turned out to cheer the dogs and savor Salt Spring lamb.

Maintaining what turned out to be a perfect distance, [illegible] kept the sheep moving, but never so close as to cause the small flock to stop and make a stand. Conversely, she stayed close enough to prevent them from simply stopping for a breather.

The sheep thundered between two steel posts, hopped a ditch and headed straight for Trixie's owner, John Wickson of Merville.

They circled Wickson and he and Trixie then moved the sheep through a chute. Once through, it was simply a matter of penning the foursome long enough to get the gate closed.

The ditch turned out to be a stumbling block for several dogs at the trials, and it seemed that almost every one of Ted Akerman's fuzzy foursomes, contained at least one independent-minded beast.

One run enjoyed by the crowd featured two border collies named Jack and Jill, who worked in perfect unison to move five ducks around the field and into the pen.

The trials were especially heartwarming to Mrs. W. P. Evans and her daughter and grandson, Daisy and Alan Gear, who were on hand to present the W.P. Evans Memorial Trophy to Wickson and Trixie. Bill Evans moved to Salt Spring from England in 1912, and except for a six-month stint of managing a Duncan farm, he lived the next 68 years on the island.

Evans was noted for several things. He started the first herd of registered Jersey cows on the island, and for many years he served as the island vet. The year after he died, his family set up a trophy to commemorate another first in Bill Evans' life — the introduction of working border collies to the B.C. scene.

As interest in working border collies on the island waned in the years after 1969, the trials were moved off island to such places as Duncan and Saanich. But Saturday's turnout was enough to convince the Salt Spring Island Farmers Institute that the trials are on the island to stay for a while.

Car parks endorsed

Provision of two new parking buildings to serve the northern downtown core was endorsed today by city council planning and zoning committee.

The recommendation, from the Victoria Advisory Planning Commission, was hailed by committee chairman Ald. Bob Wright as a means of keeping life in the downtown area, "regardless of how many shopping centres they want to build in the outlying area."

Committee members passed the recommendation along to council that the next parkades, timed for need and available financing, should be located near the corner of Pandora and Government, and in the southwest area forming part of public land developments on Wharf Street. It should have at least 260 spaces.

The APC rejected a suggestion that the 800 block between Yates and View be given priority for parking development.

The commission affirmed the city's parkade development policies, including the accommodation of customer parking as first priority, using any surplus space by renting to commuters, and the enhancement of future parkade appearance by mixing and layering shops, parking facilities, offices and apartments.

Co-op housing board backed

Marigold Housing Co-operative Association's board of directors was given an overwhelming vote of confidence at a special membership meeting Monday night.

More than three-quarters of the co-operative members present also voted to expel dissident Ernest Blow from the co-operative effective Aug. 31.

Blow, expelled for conduct detrimental to the interests of the association, left the meeting with his wife, Gonda, but not before stating that he and other dissident members have taken their case to the attorney-general's ministry.

He said the ministry has been asked to conduct an investigation into the co-operative's affairs.

Co-operative chairman Derek Griffin said today the meeting left no doubt that the majority of the residents have confidence in the co-operative's management.

There are 86 co-operative members and 49 were at Monday's meeting.

Blow earlier circulated a petition calling for the removal of the board of directors and scheduled a special meeting for Aug. 8.

Griffin said 18 members signed the petition but did so for various reasons, including dissatisfaction by four or five with a new monthly assessment structure that requires occupants on welfare to pay more than those gainfully employed.

He said Monday's vote showed that the majority of the co-operative members don't support Blow.

Goult enters race

Former Oak Bay alderman John Goult announced Monday he will run for mayor of the municipality in November's election.

Goult becomes the second mayorality candidate. Ald. Shirley Dowell announced in May she will seek the post.

Goult served as alderman for eight years, not seeking re-election last November.

Mayor Brian Smith, elected MLA for Oak Bay-Gordon Head constituency May 10, has announced he will not seek re-election.

A former zoning committee chairman, Goult said he will campaign on the need to retain the status quo in Oak Bay.

Dowell, a former income tax assessor, was first elected to council in 1970 when she ran on a platform opposing plans for a high-rise development on the Victoria Riding Academy site on Cedar Hill Cross Road.

Phoney SIN card checks urged on immigrants

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Employers of seasonal workers should start asking more questions about people they hire to make sure they are legally permitted to work in Canada, the manager of the Victoria immigration office said today.

Gerry Elliot made the comment after three East Indians were discovered last week working without an employment permit on a farm owned by Saanich Ald. Geoff Vantreight.

Elliot said the three — Manjit Singh Bains, 29, Amol Singh Gill, 28, and Manjit Singh Pannu, 31 — had used social insurance numbers of other persons who had legally immigrated to Canada three to four years ago.

The deception wasn't discovered until earlier this month.

They were sentenced to 14 days in jail on Friday when they pleaded guilty to a violation of the Immigration Act. They will be deported to their homeland on their release. All three had worked for Vantreight for more than a year.

Elliot said there is no way to tell how many people are using other persons' insurance numbers to get work because there is no cross-checking system to detect impersonators.

The immigration branch must rely on employers to check the people they hire, although it places no legal responsibility on them to delve more deeply into their employees' backgrounds.

"We'd appreciate it if they would ask one or two more questions," he said.

Elliot said most major companies are already co-operating but smaller businesses, particularly those in agriculture, tend to accept the SIN card at face value.

He said it may be difficult to get the co-operation of farmers because "who's going to scare off a guy willing to work?"

Elliot said employers also should be wary of anyone who has an insurance number beginning with the digit 9.

Such numbers are issued to students, temporary workers and persons who have investments in Canada and need a SIN card for tax purposes.

If a person has such a number and is seeking work a check should be made to find out if he has a record of landing as an immigrant or an employment authorization permit, Elliot said.

Transmission problem cause of power failure

A transmission problem from the mainland caused a power outage between 5:32 p.m. and 6:03 p.m. Monday on Salt Spring Island and parts of Saanich and the Colwood area.

The power loss caused lights in the Victoria area to flicker momentarily. A similar situation occurred just after 8 a.m. today.

A B.C. Hydro spokesman said today's flicker was caused by a disturbance on the Island line between Nanaimo and Dunsmuir.

Coincidentally, about the time of Monday evening's power outage, a fuse blew at the Mount Tolmie reservoir pumping station, which services much of the southern half of Saanich and Gordon Head.

Hydro crews were notifed about the fuse around 9 p.m. and shortly afterward the water supply problem was resolved.

Cheap Trick: weird image, solid rock

NIELSEN
. . . just eccentric

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY
Times Staff

The interview with Cheap Trick's Rick Nielsen doesn't begin on an encouraging note.

Nielsen, who is supposed to be in his room resting after a morning flight from Calgary, is in fact zooming about the streets of Victoria on a moped.

After several attempts to reach him on the house phone fail, he shows up in the lobby with a big grin and an outstretched hand.

Nielsen, the most flamboyant member of the group and its principal song writer, is easy to recognize in a lobby bustling with Japanese tourists.

Wearing his trademark dark cap and bow tie stamped repeatedly with tiny Cheap Trick slogans, a checkerboard sweater, baggy pants and track shoes, he looks like a cross between a slimmed-down Tweedledum and Alvin the Chipmonk.

He talks like Jack Benny on benzedrine; the droll, animated voice, erratic hand movements and rolling eyes complement the costume.

Flanked by group member Tom Petersson and two representatives from Epic records, which released the enormously successful Live from Budokan in Canada, we get into the elevator with several other people. It stops suddenly and refuses to budge. Nielsen stomps on the floor, it starts moving briefly, then halts. Nielsen jumps up and down and the contraption jerks upward hestitantly.

When the door opens on the fifth floor everybody except Nielsen rushes out. He calmly continues the ride up to his room on the 14th floor.

Settled on the couch, he orders beer and cheese plates from room service and starts to talk about Cheap Trick's appeal.

"I used to be called neurotic; now I'm just considered eccentric," said Nielsen.

"I remember when we started, people said man, you've got to change your image."

Cheap Trick's weird image and onstage antics have been exploited to attract the curious to performances, but he says its solid rock and roll and artistic integrity that keeps them buying records and will assure the band's longevity.

Cheap Trick is not an overnight success, even though it may appear that way to some.

Popular in the midwestern United States as a club band, they started opening for headliners like Kiss and building a solid following of their own.

Hot stuff in Japan and Europe for several years, success in North America is only beginning to catch up. Live at Boudokan, recorded during a Japanese tour 1½ years ago, went double-platimum in the U.S. and turned the group into superstars in Canada as well.

"It really opened up for us about two years ago. We're just getting our audience."

The fact the live album shares a spot at the top of the disco-laden charts with artists like Donna Summer is a good sign for the group's irreverent, hard-driving rock, he feels.

Nielsen believes the band will live on when other top rock band fade away because it remains true to its origins. The musicianship and the style are as solid as ever and won't change.

AM radio hits like Surrender, Aint That a Shame and I Want You to Want Me don't tell the story, he insists.

"You couldn't listen to one song and know what we're about. Our music is diverse."

A knock on the door and the waiter comes in with the food.

"Cheap Trick," he shrieks pointing his finger. "I love you guys,"

"What's your name, boy?" Nielsen smiles.

Lions warned of risks from Roughies

By The Canadian Press

Complaceny is something winning football coaches don't like to think about, but it's something Vic Rapp has been fighting for the past week.

His undefeated British Columbia Lions go against the winless Saskatchewan Roughriders in a Canadian Football League contest tonight and Rapp is worried his that his charges might already be savoring a victory before hitting the field.

"If my players think it's that automatic, then we're in trouble," he said.

"If they don't come out prepared to play a real tough football game, they could get their butts beat off.

"I hope that they learned that lesson in that 19-18 squeaker last Tuesday in Winnipeg. A lesson like that is part of the maturing process and it's probably a good thing it happened at this stage of the season, espcially as we were lucky enough to get away with it.

"But I've been hammering them about complacency all week."

Complaceny won't be a problem in Edmonton, where the Eskimos host Calgary Stampeders. Last year's Western Conference finalists have in common a 2-0 record and one of the hottest rivalries in Canadian sport to go with it.

The Stampeders haven't won in Edmonton since 1976, something that has not escaped the attention of defensive lineman Lyall Woznesensky and wide receiver Tom Forzani.

"I hate that team, I really hate them," Woznesensky said of the Eskimos. "We gotta beat them real bad."

Forzani said the Stampeders' last win in Edmonton has become a faded memory and "there is a certain type of animosity that builds up in that type of circumstance."

The Lions' Rapp will be paying close attention to the outcome of the Alberta teams' grudge match because the Lions meet Edmonton once and Calgary twice in the next four games.

"So far we've faced only one top-rated team — Montreal — and our 3-0 record is not as great as it looks," Rapp said.

"We have to play better football than we have been playing to win our share of those games, and the ones after that."

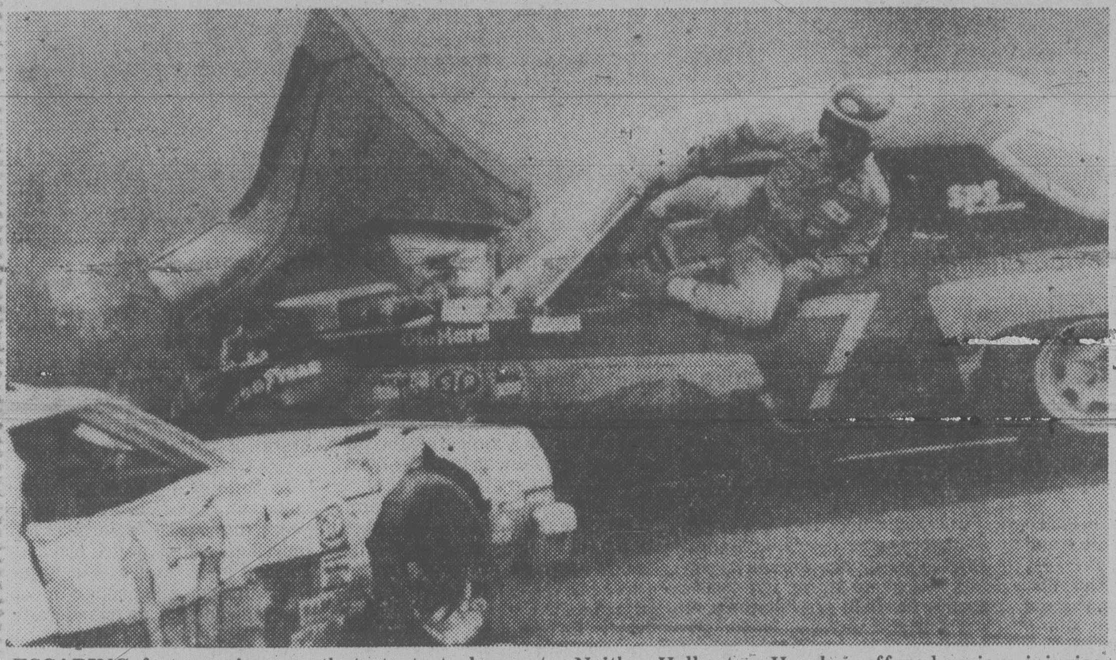
The Roughriders, who lost 28-4 to the Lions in the opening game of the season, will be without the heart of their defence, middle linebacker Cleveland Vann, who injured a knee against Hamilton last week. He will be replaced by Oklahoma State grad Daria Butler.

"Cleve was defensive captain and one of the guys on the team we knew could play," said Saskatchewan coach Ron Lancaster.

"We have some guys like that, but not enough of them. He was one of the guys the others looked to for leadership."

The Lions will have Nick Hebeler, the outstanding rookie defensive tackle, back in their lineup, and although he isn't expected to start he could see some action if Rapp doesn't get the pass rush he wants.

Winnipeg quarterback Bill Troup had lots of time to find his receivers sneaking behind the Lions secondary and "I'm sure they (the Roughriders) will test us there," Rapp said.



ESCAPING from racing car that starts to burn at front end is Al Holbert, who had collided with machine driver by Roger Hamby during running of NASCAR Pocono 500 race Monday at Long Pond, Pa. Neither Holbert or Hamby suffered serious injuries. Cale Yarborough, aided by a lightning-quick, 3.3-second pit stop with 10 laps remaining, won event as Richard Petty finished second ahead of Buddy Baker.

By The Canadian Press

The Cleveland baseball team has been playing like wild Indians since Dave Garcia took over as manager last week.

"I can't answer why we're so hot," said Garcia after winning his eighth straight American League baseball game Monday night, a 6-5 decision over Boston Red Sox. "I just know that when this club plays to its utmost, it can win a lot of games.

"When you take a look at the nine guys we put out on the field, we probably have the best defensive infield in the league, and I think Rick Manning is the best defensive outfielder in baseball," said Garcia, who took over for Jeff Torborg last Monday.

"Then you throw in our good pitching, our excellent relief pitching and our timely hitting, and you see what can happen. Right now, we don't have Toby Harrah, but when you face (Andre) Thornton, (Bobby) Bonds and Cliff Johnson in the middle of the lineup, you're going to see some real power. And tonight we could bring a guy like Gary (Alexander) off the bench."

Alexander slammed a pinch-hit homer to lead off the eighth

In other AL games, Baltimore Orioles defeated Milwaukee Brewers 2-1; Detroit Tigers turned back Texas Rangers 6-4; New York Yankees stopped Chicago White Sox 7-2; Kansas City Royals routed Toronto Blue Jays 9-0; Seattle Mariners blanked California Angels 8-0 and Minnesota Twins defeated Oakland A's 3-0.

Alexander's 13th homer came off Boston reliever Tom Burgmeier, 2-1. Bonds, who had given the Indians a 4-2 lead in the fourth with a two-run homer, his 17th, ooff Boston starter Steve Renko, gave Cleveland its eventual winning run later in the ninth with a sacrifice fly.

Mike Parrott pitched a four-hitter and Willie Horton knocked in six runs with two homers and a single to lead Seattle over California.

In National League action, Montreal Expos split with St. Louis, losing 7-2 and then winning 5-1, to retain a slim lead of two percentage points in the National League East.

Second-place Pittsburgh Pirates downed New York Mets 8-5 and Philadelphia Phillies edged Chicago Cubs 5-4 in 10 innings.

San Francisco shortstop Roger Metzger watched Houston Astros make seven errors and realized he had seen it before. Last year, when Metzger was still with the Astros, they did the same thing — set a team record for errors in a contest.

"The only difference was, we came back to win that game," said Metzger.

There was no coming back for the Astros Monday night as left-hander Bob Knepper, 8-5, held them to five hits and drove in four runs with a bases-loaded double and a bunt, helping the Giants to an 8-0 triumph, shaving Houston's first-place lead over Cincinnati Reds in the NL West Division to 2½ games.

Emil flashes power

HOQUIAM, Wash. — First-baseman Emil Drzayich scored twice and batted in five runs as the Victoria Mussels came from behind with an explosive nine-run sixth inning to defeat Grays Harbor Mets 12-9 in a Northwest League baseball game Monday.

Drzayich had six hits in six trips to the plate, including two doubles and a bases-loaded triple that capped the sixth-inning rally. Mussels hammered out 17 hits in all.

Pitcher Ed Koziol collected his sixth victory win with relief help from David Weis.

Mets had a 4-1 lead in the fourth, scoring on singles by Dave Duff, Rusty Tillman and Darryl Denby plus two walks.

Victoria	001 029 000	—12 12 3
Grays Harbor	000 420 300	— 9 9 5

Ed Koziol 6-1, Dave Weis (7) and Gary Ledbetter; Dave Smith L, Mike Miller (6), Gary Graves (7), Gary Michael (7) and Mike Duff.

Smith blasts three out

It's easy to see why Glenn Smith was named designated hitter for Farmer Construction in a Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League game Monday at Lambrick Park.

Smith smashed three home runs in as many trips to the plate to drive in a total of seven runs and help boost Farmers to a 12-9 victory over Lumberworld.

He connected for a three-run blast in the second inning, a solo effort in the fourth and another three-run shot in the fifth as the league-leaders were forced to rally twice.

Charity event goes tonight at Speedway

Western Speedway officials and all the drivers and mechanics will be donating time and money to stage the inaugural Bob Macmurchie Night for Charity event tonight.

Trophy dashes, heat races and main events will be staged among the jalopy, stock car and super-stock classes.

All gate receipts will go toward meeting the medical expenses of a 10-year-old Happy Valley boy, Shayne Nikkels, who underwent surgery to remove a malignant brain tumor last year.

Time trials start at 7.

Reelie close

Game time is 8.

Reelie, a leading playmaker for Coquitlam and most valuable player in the league for the past two seasons, is within two of the all-time assist record of 286 established by former Victoria MacDonald player Kevin Alexander between 1972 and 1976.

Only two off fourth spot in career goals with 207, Reelie will finish third in total points behind Alexander (618) and former Burnaby Cablevision star Dan Perrault (536).

Budgets all square

In Seattle on Sunday, the Pan-American Games champions lost the first game 2-1 to Seattle Westsides but bounced back to take a 10-0 decision in the second game, which was limited to five innings because of the margin.

On Saturday, Yakima Pepsis took the opener 5-2 but Burgets came back to claim a 5-1 win in the second game.

Dave Wilson earned the shutout over Seattle after Budgets had exploded for seven runs on four hits, two bases on balls and two errors in the first inning.

Mark Smith earned the win over Yakima, striking out 11 and allowing only two hits. Reg Underwood helped out with a three-run homer in the seventh inning.

Budgets are scheduled to face four league opponents in doubleheaders at Royal Athletic Park over the holiday weekend.

Marshall an Irish hero as top berth clinched

COQUITLAM — Victoria Shamrocks captured their third Western Lacrosse Association regular season champi[illegible]s here Monday night and now await the result of the remainder of the schedule to see who their opposition will be in the playoffs.

Goalkeeper Scott Marshall, who had been forced into a backup role by the stellar play of Larry Smeltzer through most of the season, was the hero of the piece as he came off the bench to replace Smeltzer and lead the Irish to a come-from-behind 15-14 victory over the Adanacs.

Coquitlam led 7-4 after the first period when Smeltzer went out and Marshall played well the rest of the way. Coquitlam led 11-7 after two

The Shamrocks won it by scoring eight goals in the third period while Marshall was holding the Adanacs to three tallies.

Jim Lynch paced the Shamrocks with four goals and four assists. Ranjit Dillon and Kevin Alexander each netted three, Ivan Thompson two and Larry Bell, Rick Baker and Steve Buckley contributed singles.

Dan Wilson led Coquitlam with three goals and five assists, followed by Jim Aitchison and Randy Delmonico with three each, and singles by Moe Jodoin, Matt Aitken, Dave Durante, Dave Cochrane and Tim Kelly.

Shamrocks finish the season at home against Nanaimo Timbermen on Wednesday while Coquitlam, which trails second-place New Westminster by two points, has two games to play, one against new Westminster at Coquitlam and a protested game against Vancouver at Kerrisdale, Friday.

New Westminster is at Vancouver tonight and at Coquitlam, Wednesday, in its final two games.

Semi-final playoffs, with the Rocks meeting the third-place finisher and the second-place team meeting Burrards, are tentatively scheduled to open Tuesday, Aug. 7. Series will be best-of-seven.

Eager Song's tune easy to remember

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

It may not yet be a hit tune, but Eager Song already is something to remember by punters at Sandown Raceway.

The three-year old bay son of Tar Song-Vickie Taylor Monday won his fourth victory in eight lifetime starts in the featured eighth pace and his third in a row.

Owned by Sten Ericsson and Al Bowman of Surrey, and driven by Bowman, Eager Song came from off the pace to defeat Smokin Ellen and return $5.60, $3.50 and $3.40.

Actually the entire Eager Song racing story has been fashioned at Sandown. Eager Song's first start was back on June 4 and hardly an indication of what was ahead. He finished fifth. In his second start, he finished third but then broke stride in the next two and was forced to re-qualify.

Since then Eager Song has demanded to be noticed, winning four of the last five. In all his winning races he has been driven by Bowman.

Speaking of starting new careers, there was an oddity in the first race when two first-timers, Commando Jove ($5.60) driven by Keith Linton, and Mr. Bartender, handled by Dave Sibiga, finished one-two in a field of eight and who knows where their careers might end? They combined for a modest (in view of the fact it was the first start for both) Exactor of $44.70.

And, on a night of firsts, driver Mike Williams got his with Golden Jim ($10.90) in the third. Golden Jim combined with Doc the Dauber, another longshot, for the bext Exactor of the night, $188.60.

Linton's win was his 61st of the season here. He took Sunday off by riding Andys Janice ($9.30)) to victory at Calgary while placing three times and finishing third in other races.

Wendy, Nina win openers

OTTAWA — Two Victorians, second-seeded Wendy Barlow, winner of the Ontario Open title Sunday, and fifth-seeded Nina Bland won opening-round matches in the women's singles competition at the Canadian tennis championships Monday.

Barlow defeated Diane Dimmer of Toronto 6-0, 6-3 and Bland downed Lorry Leigton of Calgary, 6-1, 6-3.

Top-ranked Marjorie Blackwood of Ottawa also advanced with a 6-0, 6-0 triumph over Daniele LeFrancois of Quebec City.

Stockers wind up on winning note

League-champion Stockers North Americans finished the season with an 11-1 triumph over Capital City Pirates during Victoria Senior Women's Softball League play Monday at Hyacinth Park.

Debbie Derkson threw a three-hitter to claim the pitching victory and boost her record for the season to 13-0 while Sandy Ferguson set the pace at bat by driving in five runs with two doubles.

Stockers meet Island Dryco Breakers and Pirates play Strathcona Stingers in opening games of best-of-three playoff semi-finals at 6:30 tonight on the same site.

In Macdonald Men's League play, Bob Fish cracked a two-run homer to lead Mayfair Insurance to a 2-1 win over Birch Builders and Greg Harris hurled a four-hitter to spark Saints to a 7-2 victory over Victoria Ambulance at Macdonald Park.

Triangle trips Trail in nine-inning duel

PRINCE GEORGE — Triangle, the Greater Victoria champion, turned in another excellent effort Monday and produced a major surprise at the British Columbia Little League baseball championship tournament.

Murray Bailey was credited with the pitching victory and Trail's Greg Negus was charged with the loss.

Victoria advances to the A-side final of the nine-team, double-knockout tournament for 11- and 12-year-olds, while Trail drops to the B-side, where it plays North Vancouver, which eliminated Ladysmith, 14-1.

Greg Kelley and Jason Kent hit their second home runs of the tournament for North Vancouver against Ladysmith. Kent also was the winning pitcher, giving up four hits.

Freeman Park of Prince George joined Ladysmith, defending-champion Whalley and Dawson Creek on the sidelines, as it was edged 4-3 in an extra inning by Victoria Drive of Vancouver.

The winning pitcher again hit a homer to win, as Jeff Schwab slammed a one-run shot in the bottom of the seventh. Schwab and starting-pitcher Peeyush Varshney combined to hold Prince George to four hits, while losing pitcher Craig Atkinson gave up seven.

In games today, Victoria and Dunbar of Vancouver clash in the A-side final and Trail plays North Vancouver in a B-side elimination game.

The tournament ends Friday with the winner advancing to the Canadian tournament in Lethbridge next month.

Saanich squad retains hopes

NANAIMO — Saanich Evening Optimists clipped Nanaimo 7-5 Monday to stay alive in the British Columbia Babe Ruth (14-15 years) baseball championship tournament.

Second-baseman Derrick Gelaude connected for a triple and a double and scored three times for Saanich while leftfielder Garth Downer connected for two singles and drove in two runs.

Gord Robbins picked up the pitching victory with some relief help from John Turcott in the seventh inning. They combined to allow only two hits.

Saanich, which came up with four runs in the fourth inning on two walks, a hit and an error to earn the win, faces Prince George in another losers' bracket game at 3 today.

The winner advances to meet the loser of the the other game today, between Vancouver Inter-Community and Trail, on Wednesday. Both of the Mainland squads boast 2-0 records.

The double-loss-elimination tourney concludes Thursday.

McKinney new Laker coach

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Jack McKinney, a National Basketball Association assistant coach for the last five years, was named head coach of Los Angeles Lakers Monday.

Jerry West, who stepped down last month after three years as coach, will continue as a member of the Los Angeles organization in a front-office capacity.

McKinney, getting his first shot as an NBA head coach at the age of 44, was an assistant to Portland coach Jack Ramsay, beginning in 1976-77. Before that, he held a similar post for two seasons with Milwaukee Bucks, assisting Larry Costello.

A graduate of St. Joseph's in Philadelphia, McKinney later was that school's head coach for eight seasons. His college coaching record was 165-83 and his teams won five conference championships. He was named Eastern coach of the year for 1973-74.

Carolan and Wilson lead McGinnis lists

Len Carolan of Juan de Fuca and Barry Wilkin of Seaboard took top honors among pitchers in the Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League this season while Bob Wilson of Elks-Athletics captured the batting crown.

Carolan had a leading earned-run average of 0.84 for seven innings while Wilkin had the best won-lost percentage with 11 victories and two defeats for an .846 mark.

Carolan won 12 games and lost three, the same record as Ray Beveridge of Elks-Athletics, for an .800 mark. Carolan struck out 135 batters, a league high.

Randy Jackson of Seaboard was second in earned runs with a 1.31 rating while Beveridge was third at 1.33.

Denny Sullivan shared the most victories, 12, had the most complete games, 14, and pitched the most innings, 120.

Wilson had the most hits, 35, in 87 trips to the plate for a .402 average. He also had the year's best hitting streak, 13 games, and was the toughest to strike out. He whiffed only once in 87 at bats.

Kevin Gilbert of Tally-Ho had the second best average, .386, and Bob Berglin of Port Angeles was third at .366.

Lacrosse playoffs

Times News Services

A weekend of round-robin championship play capped the season for more than 450 young players in four of the B.C. Lacrosse Association's seven minor divisions.

Burnaby Cablevision captured the A section title in Division 7 (novices) action at Pearkes Arena in Saanich with Burnaby Bosa Bros. finishing second. Saanich King Bros. was third.

Port Moody won the B-level gold medal, Langley the silver, Vancouver the bronze. Saanich Peninsula was fourth and Coquitlam fifth.

In closing games, Cablevision defeated Kings 15-5, and Bosas beat the Kings 11-4; Langley defeated Coquitlam 17-1, Port Moody nipped Peninsula 7-6, and Vancouver defeated Coquitlam 16-1.

In Division 2 midget action in Burnaby, Surrey took the A-level gold medal while the Saanich Optimists topped B-level contenders.

Saanich was 4-1 in the six team, round-robin event, defeating Port Coquitlam 10-5, Burnaby II 10-9, White Rock 10-7, Burnaby I 13-7, and losing to Saanich B & E Floorcovering 11-7. Saanich B & E won the bronze.

Optimist goalkeeper Jeff Shillington and Duane Ruddock of B & E were named to the all-star team.

In Nanaimo, Burnaby Cablevision emerged A-level champion in Division 3 bantam play and Port Coquitlam captured the B title.

Federal cuts rile Kamloops

KAMLOOPS (CP) — The city of Kamloops will fight to restore plans for a $35-million medium security prison, says Don Cameron, the Conservative MP for the area.

Cameron was speaking to a meeting called by Kamloops Mayor Mike Latta after the federal government announced that plans for the prison have been cancelled because of an austerity drive.

Last week Ottawa announced capital spending cuts of $200 to $250 million of which, Latta said, 12 to 15 per cent of the national spending-cuts will affect Kamloops directly.

Meanwhile, former Liberal cabinet minister Len Marchand, said more than $1 million had been spent on the prison for planning, studies and site preparation.

Stink persists

VANCOUVER (CP) — Rain forecast for today could wash away Barrie Mills's five-day-old puzzler: finding where a stinky cloud of sulphur-like odor comes from each night recently in the Vancouver area.

Mills, head of the air pollution section of the Greater Vancouver Regional District, says his staff, responding to a lot of complaints, has been turning its collective nose in every direction, but has not yet found the offending source.

The odor develops in the east end of the Lower Mainland, and moves westward as the air inversion layer drops at night.

Bathers offend

CRANBROOK (CP) - The Regional District of East Kootenay has decided not to act on a complaint about nude swimming at Sheep Creek hot springs, 40 miles north of here.

One director has asked that the RCMP be notified of the complaint. However, the board has decided to forget the problem because publicity would make it worse.

Charge dropped

DUNCAN — A manslaughter charge against Michael Patrick Mullaly in the May 8 death of Ladysmith hotel owner Walter Burnside has been dismissed by Provincial Court Judge Lance Heard because of insufficient evidence.

Body located

KAMLOOPS (CP) — The body of Lorne Hunt, 71, of Quesnel, missing since a boating accident July 22, has been found on the Clearwater River north of here.

Hunt and Newton Schilling, 62, of Quesnel died. Still missing and believed drowned is Raymond Wheeler, 44, also of Quesnel.

Creek pollution charges dropped

DUNCAN — Charges against three area logging companied of dumping debris into water frequented by fish were dismissed because there simply weren't enough fish.

Provincial Court Judge Lance Heard dismissed charges against Lens Logging, Pacific Logging and T. W. MacKenziie Logging, later merged with Pacific.

Federal fisheries officers said the offences took place between September, 1977, and 1978 in West Shaw Creek five miles north of the west end of Cowichan Lake.

"What gives me concern is whether the waters are frequented by fish," Heard said after provincial fish and wildlife witnesses testified that trout were found in the creek.

But Heard pointed out there were only minimal findings of trout — one fish every 30 feet or so.

Referring the several dictionary definitions of the word frequent, the judge said: "By no stretch of the imagination can I find on the evidence before me that the creek is frequented by fish."

Uranium report due soon

A three-man government commission, appointed to investigate safety standards in uranium mining in B.C., will have an interim report ready for study by the government next month, an environment ministry spokesman said Monday.

The report is expected to provide a detailed reply to allegations made by environment groups that proposed uranium mining projects in the interior of the province pose a serious health threat to the workers, members of the public and the environment, he said.

The report will not deal with the advisability of widespread uranium mining in the province, the spokesman said, but will document evidence collected during a commission investigation to determine if federal and provincial safety requirements will provide adequate protection if uranium mining is allowed in B.C.

Last week, 21 environmental groups petitioned Environment Minister Rafe Mair to halt exploratory uranium drilling and impose a moratorium on all mining pending the completion of the commission's investigation.

Mair said he would not be pressured into imposing the moratorium because the government already had a temporary moratorium in effect. He also rejected a demand for a ban on explorative drilling after being assured by Energy Minister Jim Hewitt that "no active exploration at this time could constitute a danger."

Allegations that "disruptive exploration" is being carried out in the Okanagan and West Kootenays area have been made by environmentalist Cliff Stainsby, spokesman of the Environmental Alliance Against Uranium Mining.

Salmon fishermen okay price

VANCOUVER (UPC) — A strike in British Columbia's fishing industry remains a possibility despite the acceptance by 7,000 salmon fishermen of a new purchase price schedule which increases salmon prices by an average 20 per cent this year.

Bill Propocation, spokesman for the fishermen's section of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union, said Monday fishermen voted 79 per cent in favor of the one-year pact.

But he warned the fishermen will not put out their nets unless the companies also reach agreement with 4,600 shoreworkers and tendermen. The two groups have threatened to shut down B.C.'s third largest industry Aug. 5 unless the companies better their current wage offer.

UFAWU president Jack Nichol said Monday the union is mobilizing for strike action although further negotiations were scheduled between the two groups and industry today.

All boats in the fleet have been advised to bring their catches into port no later than midnight Thursday so the fish can be processed before a strike — if there is one, he said.

The strike deadline comes after the shoreworkers and the tendermen voted 73.8 and 79 per cent respectively to reject the companies' "final" offer. The shoreworkers have been offered a 70-cents-an-hour raise to $8.12 hourly in Vancouver and $8.47 in Prince Rupert; the tendermen, a 9.25 per cent increase.

Under the new agreement, sockeye salmon will go up to a minimum price of $1.05 a pound from 88 cents; large red spring will bring $1.35, up from $1.10; others all going up by about 20 per cent.

"We're hoping the acceptance by the fishermen will convince the shoreworkers and tendermen to settle," said Mike Burgess, executive secretary of the Fisheries' Association of B.C. "Both sides are under the gun at this point and will have to make compromises to avert a strike nobody wants."

Burgess said it is impossible to estimate what the cost of a strike, timed to coincide with the August run of pink salmon along B.C.'s coast, would be, but said it would have "very serious implications."

Hewitt admits fault in Tordon mishap

PENTICTON (CP) — Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt has denied earlier government excuses for pesticide contamination near this Okanagan city and says his staff must share the blame with a host of others.

The contamination occurred in late June when Tordon 22K being sprayed on an Indian reserve landed on surrounding areas and killed vegetables and fruit in gardens and orchards up to half a kilometre from the target zone.

While visiting the area, Hewitt told residents that the contamination was neither a mystery nor caused by a hairline fracture in the airplane's spraying equipment, both explanations given after a one-man investigation by the provincial government's Pesticide Control Branch.

The minister said the Indian band, the applicators, his own ministry staff and the company that made the chemical must share the blame.

"It's pretty obvious it's not a fracture that caused these kind of effects, so it's not a fracture, it has to be drift," Hewitt said.

An official of the Kamloops-based spraying company said the pesticide control official had not seen the airplane before releasing the explanation, and added that no one looked for a leak until two weeks after the incident.

The official's news release said the fracture was noted the same day as the spraying was done.

Area residents have accused the government of making up the excuses because aerial pesticide applications in other parts of the province might be jeopardized if it admitted the contamination was caused by wind drift.

They say they are worried about the threat to health in the community.

The U.S. National Cancer Institute has identifed Tordon 22K's active ingredient, picloram, as one that causes tumors and cancer.

Agriculture Canada spokesman Wayne Ormrod said the product labels warn against aerial applications because of drift hazards but that provincial agriculture officials he has talked to "appeared to be unaware of the terms of the label.

"We spray Tordon all over the province for knapweed," Hewitt said.

SFU picket fined $250

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Simon Fraser University student has been fined $250 for his part in a highly-publicized picket line scuffle with RCMP last March.

Judge Selwyn Romilly found Armitage guilty of blocking a highway, but not guilty of obstructing a police officer.

People who take chances with the law to gain publicity for a cause also take the risk of going to jail, said the judge.

If it wasn't for the fact that Armitage was a young man who probably was duped, aided and abetted by persons more sophisticated about the law, he probably would be going to jail, the judge added.

Romilly, dismissing the obstruction charge, said the roadway was clear by the time of the incident that gave rise to the charge against Armitage.

Court dates for the other 16 persons charged were to be set later this week.

Open pit mine tries four on, four off

KAMLOOPS (CP) — A work-scheduling experiment that will see Afton Mines union employees work four days followed by four days off will begin Aug. 1, a union spokesman said Monday.

The employees will work four 12-hour shifts, then take four days off, said Ken Strange, United Steelworkers of America representative.

The experiment will last for six months.

Strange said Afton will be the first B.C. open pit to try the four-on, four-off system.

He added that it "could set a pattern for the entire mining industry in B.C."

Opening lead—king of hearts.

The deal was played on Bridge-O-Rama before a large and enthusiastic audience. The spectators, regardless of their sympathies, were in a high state of excitement when the hand was shown on the huge electronic screen. They saw that the Swedish North-South pair could make a vulnerable grand slam by simply guessing which opponent had the king of spades.

A great roar reverberated from the audience when South (Svenerik Berglund) bid seven diamonds. They knew that the Italian pair at the first table had already bid and made six diamonds.

The Italian West led the king of hearts, taken with the ace. Berglund now took five long minutes to study the situation as the spectators argued back and forth whether he would guess the location of the king of spades and thus avoid a heart loser. Most of them thought that declarer would cash the ace of spades and then lead the queen, discarding a heart after East followed low.

The spectators sat transfixed until, at long last, Berglund played a club to the ace, led the ten of spades, and followed low from dummy. At this point, pandemonium broke loose. The cheers, the groans, the shouts, the applause and the I-told-you-so's that followed could surely have been heard in Stockholm.

Berglund then proceeded to make the grand slam by ruffing two clubs in dummy and discarding a heart on the ace of spades. The Swedish team gained 13 international match points instead of losing 16 on the deal, and the final outcome was that Sweden won the match by a score of 66 imps to 49.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Wednesday, August 1,
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Romance, intrigue, secrets are featured. You get rid of burden and finish important task. Wider recognition due; you receive offer which could mean better distribution and display. Stick with number 9; check contracts.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Lie low — for time being; a new contact will show the way to break stalemate. Leo, Aquarius natives figure prominently. One close to you seeks legal counsel. Strive for objectivity while displaying loyalty.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You recover from recent setback. Self-esteem makes a comeback. Health improves as you get back to a "sensible diet, work schedule. Accent on pacing, dependents, pets, getting to heart of basic issues, deciding on essentials.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Be flexible, apply individual, creative touch to efforts. Long-distance communication brightens day. Gemini, Sagittarius figure prominently. News features travel, communication, social invitations, reasons for changing routine.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You get more "breathing room." Property values, sales, purchases, security crowd scenario. But you get green light for extension or special consideration. Aquarius, Scorpio, Taurus natives figure in scenario.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Member of opposite sex pays meaningful compliment. Accent on short trips, quick changes, messages, significant gains spurred by written material. Relative wants to talk, takes your time and does not really want to listen. Know it and act accordingly.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Emphasis on payments, collections, income potential. You get what you need. Improved "domestic situation" is indicated. Harmony is restored at home — if you make intelligent concession. Luxury item, art object, gourment food figure in scenario.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Cycle moves up — you define needs and get what is requested. Follow through, take initiative. You'll be at right place at right time. Be confident — events coincide with your desires, capabilities. For a time at least — you have magic touch!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Past obligations — and favors — surge to forefront. Older individual lends benefit of experience. A dream, properly interpreted, could prove prophetic. Cancer, Capricorn natives play prominent roles. What seems hidden can be located if you are persistent.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Emphasis on getting your way via charm, persuasion and intervention of a friend. Business and social areas are activated. One who had been a mere acquaintance now becomes a confidante. You'll be rid of a burden.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Accent on new ways to achieve goal. You gain support from professional superiors. Another Aquarian figurs prominently — so does a Leo. Stress originality, independence, daring and a pioneering spirit. Yes, you are going places!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Influence spreads, is "stronger" then might have been originally anticipated. Hunch pays off; you learn through teaching process. One who aided you in past is once again on scene. Long-distance communication is a highlight.

IF AUGUST 1 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are subborn, determined, independent, creative, original, dynamic and you are "spoiled" by the oppsite sex. You are accustomed to having your own way. You appreciate art, luxury — and you have been known to be extravagant. Leo, Aquarius persons play key roles in your life. September could be your most important month of 1979, a year featuring involvement, intensified relationships, business investments. Marriage or addition to family could help make this a most memorable year. You have innate sense of drama — and you generally give your all to aid those who have been oppressed.

57 years an actress but not once a star

Scott's World

By Vernon Scott

HOLLYWOOD — Ann Doran made her debut at age 11 in a scene with Douglas Fairbanks and Wallace Beery in the silent 1922 version of Robin Hood and has been acting ever since.

In the past 57 years Ann has played more than 600 roles in hundreds of movies and TV shows without ever seeing her name in lights, much less above the title.

She was a foil for Charlie Chase, Andy Clyde, Harry Langdon, the Three Stooges and Edgar (slow burn) Kennedy while under contract to Columbia Pictures.

While others went on to considerable fame and great fortunes, Ann remained all but anonymous.

Evidently she was born a character actress, the daughter of actress Rose Allen who played glamor girls in the ancient Bobby Vernon two-reelers.

"I was on the set one day watching my mother work when a beautiful lady asked if I would like to play in another movie being made on the same lot," Ann recalled. "Mother agreed because it would keep me out of mischief.

"The next day I found myself, a knobby-kneed, Dutch-bobbed blonde kid playing a page to the king in Robin Hood. The king was Wallace Beery who scared me because he was bigger, louder and more profane than my father.

"The lady who got me involved was Mary Pickford. I saw the old picture not long ago and couldn't tell myself from the eight other little pages."

Her specialty over the years has been maiden aunts, nurses, mothers and mothers-in-law and, surprisingly, judges. Those parts, of course, came along in later years.

"When I was a kid, I was put in westerns, usually playing orphans," she recalled. "I was always being rescued from terrible predicaments — caught in barbed wire, endangered by stampeding cattle or tied to a windmill.

"I left the business during that horrible pimply adolescence to go to high school in San Bernardino. But, when Dad died in 1933, I went back to work.

"I never starred in a single picture," Ann said, smiling. "It bothered me for a time that I was only a supporting player until Mr. (Director Frank) Capra had a talk with me.

"He told me the star is the top of a table and wouldn't be worth anything without the underpinning legs of the character actors to support it. I never felt like a table leg but I guess that's what I've been for all these years."

Concert-goers getting off hands

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

A whole chapter for the concert-goers manual could be written about the differences in standing ovations.

They are becoming — this summer particularly — quite usual in a city where audiences used to be accused of "sitting on their hands".

But not all standing ovations are the same; some are cumulative but incomplete, triggered by a half-dozen enthusiasts, and one could question whether they are truly deserved; but some are spontaneous and unanimous and the International Festival has seen its share of those.

Most impressive, clamorous, and thoroughly deserved was the tribute paid Sunday to the incomparable Trio Rouvier-Kantorow-Muller for its definitive and profoundly moving performance of the Shostakovich Piano Trio in E minor, Op.67. There was a second's overwhelmed silence at the end and then the entire audience, young and old, surged to its feet, clapping madly and shouting bravos.

In fact in a comprehensive concert series that has musical Victoria in raptures, Sunday's event at McPherson Playhouse was something of a standout.

It began with flutist Robert Aitken at his superb best in three little known but totally charming pieces by 20th century French composer, P.O. Ferroud. He then teamed with the sensitive and brilliant pianist, Mitchell Andrews, in a dazzling display of virtuoso artistry, playing the Grand Polonaise by 19th century virtuoso and creator of the modern flute, Theobald Boehm.

Book 2 of Debussy's Preludes permitted New York pianist Joseph Bloch to display an artistry so comprehensive, capable of so much exquisite attention to detail, such an infinite range of tonal coloration and imagery that each of the 12 pieces was experienced as a complete and perfect gem.

One musically alert international member of the audience commented that any of the big European festivals would be proud to present a concert such as this.

Another "first" for Victoria occurred at Monday's concert when flowers rained down on the stage in tribute to Ruth Laredo following her fine performance of the Beethoven second piano concerto. Accompanied — not always quite successfully in the violin section — by Victoria Symphony Summer Festival Orchestra conducted for the last time this season by Gervase de Peyer, Laredo gave a beautifully controlled, thoughtful and authoritatve performance. De Peyer was as always, vital, precise in his cueing and musically satisfying.

Great virtuosity, tenderness, a rich and expressive tone, an elegant bow were among the remarkable properties of violist Nabuko Imai in performing the lovely Telemann Concerto in G Major.

Mozart's Horn Concerto No.3 in E flat revealed the outstanding artistic and technical mastery of world-famous Barry Tuckwell. The lovely and familiar concerto sparkled with life and light and was lyrical in its purity of tone and phrase in the Romanze movement.

. . . And his luck didn't just end there

He had to stay under water about 25 seconds to get to the bill, which was lying 12 metres below the surface.

"It was certainly worth the effort," he said. "I could hardly believe that $50 would just be sitting there waiting for somebody to dive down and get it."

He and his wife, Susan, residents of 2950 Richmond, were on their way to Port Alberni when they stopped at Little Qualicum Falls, near Parksville.

Michael, 26, a veteran scuba diver, saw the bill lying at the bottom of the falls so he climbed carefully down the canyon wall and prepared for the ordeal.

"I did some breathing exercises and planned my descent. I lowered myself into the water, took a deep breath, and down I went. I had to stop at the 7-metre level and clear my ears and again at the 10-metre level, because my ears were popping.

"I could see the money just 3 metres away so I told myself: Go for it! It was wedged between two pebbles. I grabbed it, and came up fast. I waved to my wife.

"Then I discovered I had drawn quite a crowd. A number of tourists heard I was diving for money and they all gathered around and waved when I came up.

"It was the talk of the whole area, I learned later."

But Colclough wasn't through for the day.

While at the bottom he had noticed a quarter about 7 metres from the $50 bill. So down he went again.

"I knew it was hazardous because the current is very strong but, what the heck, I'd go down there for a dime or a nickel. I love diving."

Later in the day he found another treasure: a case of beer in 8 metres of water.

Then it was off to Port Alberni for a bottle of champagne.

But the day's adventures had not ended. En route he encountered an overturned truck that had been carrying salmon from Port Alberni, bound for Vancouver. An amateur photographer, he took a photo of a crew gathering the salmon and he was rewarded with a 10-pound fish.

He finally got to Port Alberni and bought the champagne.

"I bought it with the $50 bill. It was still a little damp."

Lawyer fears for safety of Demeter

TORONTO (CP) — Peter Demeter probably would live longer if he were moved from the maximum-security Millhaven Institution near Kingston, Ont., his lawyer said Monday.

Demeter is in satisfactory condition in a Kingston hospital after being found unconscious in his cell Saturday with head bruises.

Lawyer Richard Sommers said in an interview that he would like to have Demeter transferred to another penitentiary.

$41M UVic budget approved

The University of Victoria board of governors Monday approved a $41.1 million budget for 1979-80, up $3.1 million or 8.1 per cent over the previous year's spending.

A big part of the increase was a $2.75 million bill for a pay hike for faculty members, whose salaries were boosted by the board earlier this month by an average 5.75 per cent.

WIN! $1,000.00 IN CASH PRIZES EVERY OTHER WEEK!

WIN! GRAND PRIZE TRIP FOR TWO TO HAWAII, By Wardair

The object is to match the official letters published every day with the letters in the grid which you have filled in with your name (see samples 1 and 2). When you have circled a row of letters across, vertically, or diagonally either way, send your entry in for the bi-weekly draw for cash prizes. You may submit as many entries as you wish per game, but each must be in a separate envelope.

THE NAME GAME
Rules and Procedures

Object of "The Name Game": To become eligible for prize drawings by matching letters of the alphabet, published in the Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist, with the letters in your name. Each game starts with a Saturday Times and ends in the Sunday Colonist two weeks later. The official entry form will be published every day. All members of a family may play. There is no age limit. You may enter more than once but only one entry per envelope may be submitted. As each game ends, you are invited to play the next game.

1. Using the official entry form or a reasonably hand-drawn facsimile (no mechanically reproduced forms accepted), start at the upper left hand corner and print your name continuously, one letter in each square, until all the squares are filled in. (For example, if your name is John Anderson, Sample 1 shows how to fill out your entry form.) Do not include punctuation.
Use your legal name, in a form which can be verified on your driver's licence, social security card or other official identification. You may use various forms of your first name (e.g. John, Jonathan or John S.), as long as your identity can be verified. No nicknames, please.
2. Letters for the Name Game will be published as follows: 4 letters Saturday Times and Sunday Colonist and 3 letters daily. When an official letter matches one in your diagram, circle it on your entry. That letter may appear in more than one square on your diagram, but you may circle only one such letter (of your choice) each time. Since individual letters are selected at random, they may appear more than once — even on the same day. You may circle one such letter as many times as that letter is published. The same letters will be published in the Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist, but may only be used once in any one entry.
3. When you match enough letters to complete one row on your diagram — horizontal, vertical or diagonal (corner to corner), as in Sample 2, you are eligible for the prize drawings for that game. Drawings for 15 prizes will be held every other week for 10 weeks. At each drawing $500 goes to the first name drawn, $100 to the next —, $50 each to the next 3, and $25 for the last 10 — (Winners must answer a time-limited skill-testing question before collecting prizes.) All names drawn will be returned to the drum for the grand prize drawing.
4. Mail your completed entry form to: The Name Game, Victoria Press, P.O. Box 1390, Victoria, B.C. V8W 3C4; postmarked no later than the Monday following the end of that game. Completed entries may also be delivered, in a sealed envelope, to Victoria Press, no later than Tuesday, the following day. The game number (such as 'Game 1', 'Game 2', etc.) must appear at the lower left-hand corner of the envelope.
5. All entries will be placed in a container and the winning entries will be drawn at random. Winners will be announced in the Colonist and Times on the Friday following the close of each game. The odds of winning will depend on the number of eligible entries received.
6. It is not necessary to buy the Times or Colonist to participate. Copies of the newspaper may be inspected free of charge at the newspaper's offices during regular business hours. Sorry, official letters will not be given over the phone.
7. Employees of the newspapers and members of their immediate families are not eligible to participate. Unclaimed or invalidly claimed prizes will be donated to a recognized charity at the close of the contest.
8. Winners agree to allow publication of their names, pictures and publicity in the Times and Colonist without additional consideration. Submission of an entry indicates acceptance of all game rules.
9. Decisions of Victoria Press judges in all matters relating to the The Name Game will be final.

Cecily Vold . . . once met a grizzly

Cecily Vold is with the forest ecology branch of the British Columbia Forest Service.

Last year, during the summer months, she was one of a group of 10 people — two girls and eight guys — doing ecology work in the Prince Rupert area.

They travelled aboard the forest service boat Surveyor from Bella Coola to Prince Rupert, towing a helicopter all the way.

There were days when they lived aboard that boat, with a crew member to prepare their meals. At other times they were ashore under canvas and they did their own cooking.

The helicopter was used to take the group to high places in wilderness areas.

They worked their way back to the estuaries from there, Cecily explains, identifying eco-system plots.

"We'd mentally draw a string around a certain area and as we worked through it we'd identify all the plants, the different soils and any wild animals we glimpsed, as well as doing measurements on the trees."

It was all part of a continuing forest service program, she says, that has as its eventual objective a complete eco-system map of the province.

So far this year Cecily has been kept busy at her desk where she is helping to complete a report on last year's field work and to prepare an outline on how to put in eco-system plots.

However, before the summer is over, she hopes to get back into the field again, for a short time, at least.

This interesting young woman is a Berkeley, California, girl. She took her bachelor of science degree in forestry at University of California (Berkeley) and she met her husband, Terje Vold, a Norwegian, at Berkeley, where he also obtained a B.Sc. in forestry.

In the early 1970s the Volds came to British Columbia, because they believed there were more opportunities in forestry here and also because they were drawn by the natural beauty of this province.

They lived, at first, in Vancouver where they attended University of British Columbia, and where both gained their Masters degree in forestry, at the same time.

As soon as possible they started proceedings to settle permanently in this country and today, as Cicely tells you "we are Canadian citizens."

She gained her first work experience in the province as a member of a UBC group that did a visual analysis of landscapes and scenery along the Alaska Highway for the parks board.

This was followed by field work with a group doing wildlife habitate analysis for the provincial ministry of the environment.

"We travelled in four wheel drives, on motor scooters, in helicopters and fixed-wheel aircraft, to find close-cropped areas and places where there was evidence of heavy wild animal droppings, as clues to the winter browsing spots of those animals."

After that she joined the forest ecology branch where she has been for more than a year.

High on her list of never-to-be-forgotten experiences out in the field is a day when she was on horseback, separated from others in the party, and came face-to-face with a full-grown grizzly bear.

"I was scared stiff," she recalls, "mainly because I didn't know how my horse would react.

"Luckily when I yelled to the others my voice seemed to scare the bear and it took off into the underbrush ahead of me."

If she has a favorite among wild animals, its the wolves.

"They are beautiful creatures but they have got themselves into trouble by raiding livestock and bringing down too many deer and making hunters angry."

Looking ahead Cecily Vold sees an increasing demand on forestry resources.

At the same time she envisions increased opportunities for young people, including young women, in natural resources management.

Up to the present, while a few women have been accepted and welcomed, there have been people who cling to the old-fashioned idea that women should not be allowed out in the field.

"Most of those old-timers are getting used to us now," she says. "Nevertheless, there are still a few of them out there."

She also believes the public should be educated to realize that forestry resources — other resources in the province too for that matter, coal, oil, gas, everything — are not unlimited.

And that they will diminish if we allow them to be exploited.

YOUTH CLINIC

Young readers' questions on human relations and sex are answered by a panel of experts: Marion Powell, medical doctor; Graham Cotter, clergyman; Dr. Saul Levine, psychiatrist, and Bruce Vichert, social worker.

DEAR DR. LEVINE: I am 15 years old and I have not had any friends since I was nine or 10. It's because I have a weird personality and I'm ugly. I don't think people would mind my ugliness if I had a better personality. I have been trying to improve it since Grade 6 but I have made little progress. I hate being made fun of but I don't blame the kids who do it, since I would make fun of someone if that person acted like me. I can't commit suicide because of my religion but I don't want to live the rest of my life without friends, or bother people with my behavior. Do you know of a person or agency that can help me? Is there such a person as a personality expert?

ANSWER: I agree that you would do well to get help. I don't know if you are truly "ugly." I know very few ugly people. Very few of us are paragons of beauty and there are many relatively physicaly unattractive people who make up for their less-than-perfect appearance by radiating inner beauty and strengths. My concern is that you find your own personality deficient. You are so demoralized that you haven't the drive and the feelings to project an image of attractiveness. You feel lonely, frustrated and pessimistic.

By "personality expert," I take it you mean someone who can help you like yourself better, and get others to like you better. Get in touch with a local teen or adolescent centre. If you don't know where one is, your parents or doctor or school counsellor could advise you. A psychotherapist (psychologist, psychiatrist, social worker) might well be able to help you, either individually or via group therapy.

DEAR MR. VICHERT: I am a 14-year-old girl in Grade 8. Why do half the kids in school smoke? Many of my friends smoke and they often make fun of me because I have never tried it and I have no intention of doing so. I feel left out because I don't swear, drink or steal either. But how come I am constantly being called a prude just because I'm not like everyone else?

ANSWER: You are certainly a person to be admired and respected, because you have made some good decisions and have the strength to live by them. I would certainly not consider you a "prude."

People who do things that are bad for themselves, such as smoking or stealing, love to try to talk other people into doing it also. It somehow makes them feel better to see others develop the same-bad habits. It is a fault in them, not in you, and I would certainly want to support you, and encourage you, not to join them. Do you need friends that want you to do destructive things?

DEAR DR. COTTER: I'm a 14-year-old girl and I've had it. I just can't get along with my mother. My dad lives in another country. I cry until I get a headache, behind closed doors. I try to tell her I love her but it's no use. She gets tired at work and blames it on me; my sister does something wrong, I get punished. Everyone except my friend at school thinks I'm bad.

I'm a Catholic and love God very much, and love people and nature. But to my mother I'm the devil's daughter. And she complains because we're not rich. Damn it! I hate money. The world doesn't need money, it needs love.

Mom tells me that at 16 she'll throw me out to work and support myself. And she's going to take me to her native country and keep me there. I'm a Canadian citizen. Can so do that to me against my will? She's not Canadian.

ANSWER: I think if this conflict goes on much longer you should ask for help from the Catholic Children's Aid Society in you community. Look up the number in the telephone book.

It might help if you understand your mother. She is a desperate woman whose life is not satisfactory to her and probably, because she comes from a different country, she does not understand what is happening here. She sees you with great freedom at school and she is confined to work she doesn't like in a country she doesn't like.

Since you are a Christian, you will know to pray and to forgive, and to go on loving her. Don't get as desperate as she is, or the only source of redemption and change in your household will disappear.

DEAR DR. POWELL: I am an 18-year-old girl and I feel that I should be getting more out of sex. I have had intercourse several times, and everytime I've gotten no excitement or pleasure from it.

It seems that I build myself up (all excited) before, but when I'm actually having intercourse I get bored. Is there something wrong with me?

ANSWER: There is something wrong with anyone 18 years old who gets bored with sex. Since you did not tell me whether you were having sex because you cared deeply for you partner, I wonder if you are having sex only because you are seeking pleasure and exitement. Sexual intercourse should occur as a result of deep commitment to another person and should be a tangible sign of that commitment.

You and your boyfriend may decide to stop having a sexual relationship right now.

YOUR HEALTH

by L. L. Coleman, MD

Whenever I catch cold or have any infection it takes me weeks to get over being tired. I'm 27, and I'm concerned because this happens to me, but not to other young people I know. Isn't this unusual? — Miss H.D.

DEAR MISS D.: Fatigue is a symptom, not an illness. It is a common complaint brought to the attention of doctors. Fatigue is a special cry of the body that begs for added rest when recovering from an illness or surgery.

You are not unusual in your reaction to infection. All of us have noticed that even after a simple cold it may take days to develop enough energy to go back to the ordinary chores of daily living. This is technically known as "post-infectious asthenia," or weakness following infection.

Some people do have the facility for bounding back more readily than others. The physical and emotional reserve varies from person to person.

When one's reserve is unusually diminished, as seems to be your case, it is wise to try to find out if there is any underlying medical condition to account for it. Some people with a mild anemia, for example, may be unusually devitalized by infections. Others may have prolonged feelings of weakness which can be attributed to the psychological overtones of even mild illnesses.

Many people are driven by the urgent need to return to work too quickly after an infection. When this happens, they find their productivity is reduced to a minimum. It is, therefore, wiser for anyone with unusual fatigue to indulge themselves with an extra day or two of "body repair" before returning to full activity.

There should be particular care about nutritious diet and vitamin supplements. Added protein in the diet is important because of the known loss of protein that occurs even with relatively slight infections.

Do you think that all newborn boys should be circumcised? — Mr. R.T.

DEAR MR. T.: At one time it was thought that circumcision had only religious implications. Today, most physicians recommend the removal of the foreskin of the penis because the penis can more easily be kept clean and free from skin infections.

It is fascinating to study the history of circumcision and to find that it was performed in primitive tribes far removed from any semblance of civilization.

A survey done about 15 years ago showed that men who were circumcised in infancy rarely developed cancer of the penis. It was found, too, that women married to men who were circumcised almost never developed cancer of the cervix of the uterus.

Now, from U.K. the Big Knot

By BRUCE LEVETT

LONDON (CP) — "I say, old chap — what's that unslightly growth on your hip? Nothing terminal, I trust?"

The only thing terminal about it is my patience.

I don't know whether this latest thing in fashion has reached Canada yet, but over here The Big Knot is The Big Thing.

Ladies have taken to wearing short shifts, about mid-thigh, and — just to make it all the more tantalising — tying a huge knot above the hip.

Wonderful, did I hear you say?

All very well, unless you happen to be about six-foot-two and wed to someone on the wrong side of five feet tall.

In that case, she is inclined to usurp your T-shirts for her own use and perform on them a sheepshank, a bowline-on-a-bight or even a simple reef knot somewhere along the lower region.

I must admit, it does something for the old libido.

However, one would think, wouldn't one, that she would have the decency — and believe me, decency hasn't a heck of a lot to do with it — to untie the knot when she has finished with the shirt.

Now, consider this: It's seven o'clock in the morning. You're late enough as it is.

You do a 1½-gainer into your underwear drawer and sweep out the jockey shorts and T-shirt while shaving and pondering the choice of a shirt.

It's not until you're on the bus, with old ladies fighting to offer you their seats, that the penny drops. Something is amiss.

Have you ever, on a double-decker bus, attempted to undo a cantaloupe-sized knot in your underwear while still maintaining a mien of grace and favor?

This sceptered isle has given the world the miniskirt, the slashed dress, and now The Big Knot.

Dear Abby

by Abigail Van Buren

'Camp Hater' finds support

DEAR ABBY: A 12-year-girl signed CAMP HATER wrote that she was being "forced" to go to summer camp for two months. She said she went last year and "hated it." Also that her parents kept telling her how "lucky" she was that they could afford to send her, but she felt as though they just wanted to get rid of her for two months.

She asked you what to do, and you told her to get over her negative attitude and go. Then you added the meaningless cliche: Most people have about as good a time as they make up their minds to have.

I disagree totally with your answer, Abby. When I was a boy, my parents made me go to summer camp. I hated it at first, although later I learned to like it.

The mistake my parents made was in sending me too young. I was only 8 when I was sent away for two whole months. If they had waited until I was 10, I would have loved it. Please print this — ME.

DEAR ME: My mail is running overwhelmingly against me and in favor of the CAMP HATER. Read on.

DEAR ABBY: I am an old camp counsellor, so I believe CAMP HATER when she said she thought her parents were trying to get rid of her for two months. That's the feeling a lot of camp-haters had; after meeting their parents, I had to agree with the kids.

Sending kids to camp for two months as first-year campers is unwise. They should be sent to a camp closer to home for a week to see how they get along — GRANDMA.

DEAR ABBY: One of our co-workers (I'll call her Pam) recently moved into a new home. Two other co-workers (I'll call them Mary and Donna) who are Pam's best friends decided to surprise her with a housewarming gift from "The Office Gang."

Without consulting anyone in the office, Mary and Donna bought an expensive lamp, signed all the co-workers' names on the card, then collected from everyone in the office to pay for it!

I kicked in my share because I didn't want to start anything. But I was so mad I could have bitten a nail in half.

I appreciated Mary and Donna wanting to surprise Pam, but not at my expense.

Did I do the right thing? I certainly don't feel any better — MAD.

DEAR MAD: No. I think you should have told Mary and Donna that because you weren't consulted beforehand, and gave no one permission to sign your name on the card, you owed nobody anything. And, furthermore, if and when you decide to warm Pam's house, you'll do it your way.

Street kids find a friend

Street children found a new friend Monday, a Victoria alderman who said today he will urge council to take direct steps to help their situation.

He admits he was disturbed by what he learned of broken homes, beatings, school failures, drunkenness, drug problems and a sense of rejection felt by many of the youngsters.

Street children are surviving by their wits, bedding down where they can find a place to spread a sleeping bag — sometimes in the open — begging for handouts, eating at missions, turning to prostitution. They drift about the downtown core, an aimless group aged 11 and up.

"These kids have no confidence," Blencoe said. "They need someone to get close to them who they can trust.

"Clearly, there has to be some direct work on the street . . . someone who can start to work with them on a daily basis."

Blencoe said some of the youngsters can be redirected; others, the hard core, can't be. But all need attention and it will help to keep the pressures on them to a minimum, such as the police harrassment felt by some.

The alderman hopes to take some of the youngsters to council's Group A committee meeting Thursday to tell about themselves in the Year of the Child.

Saanich bid to quash sewage dump at sea

Saanich will take legal action to quash a permit that would allow sewage to be dumped into the sea at Ten Mile Point from a private home.

At an in-camera meeting Monday council empowered Mayor Mel Couvelier to "take action to protect the interests of the municipality's coastline."

The Capital Regional District's board of health has voted 6-4 to issue a permit to Ken Davies, president of Kajo Holdings Ltd., to construct an outfall at the foot of White Rock Street for a home he proposes to build.

Couvelier said today council had considered Davies' offer but was not prepared to buy the site at this time.

He said there are about 50 properties in Saanich that border on either fresh or salt water and permitting Davies to go ahead with the outfall would be setting a dangerous precedent.

John McKay photo

'DON'T CLAP, JUST throw money' said the one-man band on the Causeway on the weekend and the crowd he attracted did just that. He wouldn't give his name but hinted he calls Galiano Island home. "I just like to make people smile," he said.

Beach patrols urged

A Saanich ad hoc committee has recommended that the municipality's police force reactivate beach patrols as part of an attack on rowdy parties.

The committee also recommended Monday that Victoria-area police forces conduct educational programs at schools.

Greater effort should also be made to get more citizen co-operation in order to prevent outdoor parties from getting out of control, the committee said.

Mayor Mel Couvelier, chairman of the police board, said he would agree to reactivating the beach patrols as long as it didn't mean additional policemen being paid overtime.

Inspector Ted Owen said 125 complaints about rowdy beach parties were received between March 2 and July 18.

New market

Saanich council gave approval Monday to Capital Markets Ltd. for construction of a supermarket behind the McKenzie Mall. The site for the 17,620-square-foot building is bounded by Garnet, McKenzie and Cedar Hill.

Zoning retained for Rest Haven

A committee composed of all members of Sidney council Monday recommended that Rest Haven Island and part of an adjoining property be retained as an institutional zone.

This means the property can still be used for a hospital and school, as well as a park.

The remainder of the property owned by the Seventh-Day Adventist Church, is in the low-density residential zoning category.

The committee also recommended the entire property, about 11½ acres, be designated as a development permit area.

The move would give council a say on how the property is developed.

Mayor Norma Sealey said the recommendations will be discussed further at the next council meeting.

She said there is considerable feedback on a proposal that the 3.25-acre island in Tsehum Harbor be designated as a park.

She said the park proposal hasn't yet been discussed with the Capital Regional District but she intended to do this.

The island property and building was first used as a private club, then as a convalescent hospital for returning soldiers in the First World War.

In 1921, the church bought the property as a sanatorium. It opened as an acute care hospital in 1930. In 1978, its place was taken by the 75-bed acute-care wing of the Saanich Peninsula Hospital.

Reporting award goes to CFAX

CFAX radio station in Victoria has won the Murrow award in the annual International competition of the Radio-Television News Directors Association.

The award, named for the late Edward R. Murrow, is given for courage and enterprise in reporting and documenting of a significant community problem.

CFAX received the award for a "compelling" program on alcoholism.

Reporter Bev Sinclair was praised for superb use of audio tape, letting the people tell their own stories of families touched by the drinking problem in Victoria.

Before the Judge

A three-month jail sentence was imposed on a 30-year-old man who pleaded guilty to a Sunday-night break-in at a Victoria business.

John Riley Isaacson, no fixed address, appeared Monday in Victoria provincial court before Judge Fred Green and pleaded guilty to breaking and entering.

Crown counsel Wayne Smith said Victoria police responded to a silent alarm tripped at 10:40 p.m. at Harris House of Leather Care Ltd., 1717 Quadra. On arrival, officers spotted Isaacson kneeling on the floor inside the premises. While one officer kept surveillance, another climbed in through a broken window on the south side and apprehended Isaacson.

Smith said a metal screen had to be pried off before the window could be broken and entry gained. Isaacson had $5.75 in coins and a dollar bill on him at the time of his arrest.

Isaacson, who said he was a part-time waiter at a Sidney beer parlor, told the judge he was "quite impaired" at the time and was broke.

He had a criminal record which included a conviction in July of 1976 in Victoria for the same offence. He received a sentence at that time of 12 months definite and six months indeterminate. He also had previous convictions for theft, possession of stolen property and narcotics offences.

* * *

A 29-year-old woman who skipped a 1977 trial was given a jail term, fine and suspended sentence after pleading guilty to three charges.

Marion Jasper, now living in Abbotsford, was handed a two-day jail sentence for failing to appear for court Sept. 10, 1975, fined $30 for a common assault which occurred Aug. 11, 1977, and a suspended sentence, six months probation, and 100 hours of community service work for a May 5, 1979, false pretence in Saanich.

Smith said the assault incident took place at the Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans club at 1001 Wharf. Victoria police were called concerning a disturbance at about 1 a.m. On arrival, Smith said, police found Jasper punching, kicking and pulling the hair of another woman.

In connection with the false pretence charge, Jasper tendered a $127.72 cheque for groceries and it was returned by the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce marked insufficient funds. The bank indicated the account never had a higher balance than $3.64.

Green imposed the jail term after learning that the woman had a previous conviction for failing to appear in court.

A medical examination was ordered for an 18-year-old who broke down before the charge could be read to him.

Jamie Frederick Mendres, 479 South Joffree, was being charged with attempted rape in in connection with a Sunday night incident at Elk Lake Park involving a 15-year-old girl.

Fined for drinking-driving offences were Arnold Klinger, 33, of 859 Ellery, $350, and Terrance Allan Melanson, 21, of CFB Esquimalt, $325.

Speaker turfs Barrett after 'patronage' taunt

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

Opposition leader Dave Barrett will spend today — likely the last day of the legislative session — directing his troops from the sidelines.

The former premier was officially "named" by Speaker Harvey Schroeder and turfed out of the chambers following heated debate in the house Monday.

The action also disrupted a spirit of co-operation that had pervaded the legislature most of the afternoon as the members whipped through third reading on 11 bills.

But in the waning moments of the day's sitting, debate began on the 12th bill — the one ending auto insurance discrimination — which contains a clause allowing unlimited number of directors to be appointed to the Insurance Corp. of B.C.

The NDP, who want a ceiling of 12 directors, rattled off facts and figures on the salary and expenses paid the existing members of the board and said leaving the number of appointments wide open would create "a Socred Senate" filled by "the benevolent dictates of this patronage-ridden government."

NDP house leader Bill King (Shuswap-Revelstoke) said the government can't find enough money to hire nurses for the province's hospitals but can afford hundreds of thousands of dollars for Socred hacks, political hangers-on and defeated MLAs.

Barrett then called the move yet another opportunity for the government to practise pork-barrelling.

"You can bet your bottom dollar Socreds will show up on the board of directors of ICBC," he said.

Turning to McCarthy, the minister responsible for ICBC, he said the bill gives her the power to appoint unlimited friends to the board.

Her record is already known, he said, pointing to the recent cabinet order she signed as deputy premier appointing Environment Minister Rafe Mair's campaign manager to the board of the B.C. Development Corporation.

"She's the patron of patronage," he said.

McCarthy rose on a point of order and asked that the statement be withdrawn.

After several requests by Deputy Speaker Steven Rogers and Schroeder, Barrett still refused, at one point shouting "patronage, patronage, patronage, that's all it is," across the floor.

Since the incident occurred at 6 p.m. when the house rises for the day, Schroeder said there was little point in asking Barrett to leave the chamber for the rest of the sitting.

So he opted for the more serious route of calling Barrett by name. (Members are always referred to by riding or cabinet position and are never mentioned by name in the chamber. When a member is named by the Speaker and told to leave the chamber, it is a serious offence.)

The battle carried on briefly outside the house.

First Barrett presented his position under the glare of the TV lights while McCarthy waited in the shadows. As soon as Barrett stepped back, she came forward into the circle of reporters to say the charge was "absolute sheer nonsense," levelled by Barrett to grab a headline to end the session.

Barrett said if McCarthy wanted him to withdraw his comment, "then let her fire all the Socred wheeler-dealers" she's placed on various boards.

When asked if appointing a minister's campaign manager to the board of a Crown corporation is not a classic definition of patronage, McCarthy replied that "patron of patrongage is a derogatory term the leader of the opposition placed on me and I will not accept that."

McCarthy had earlier promised the house the number of directors on the board would not be increased excessively.

The acrimony could see the legislature that was first supposed to wind up July 13, carry on even past today.

The insurance bill is almost through, little debate is expected on pay raises, but the NDP has served notice it will pull all the stops on the Whistler bill.

An extended session could mean a delay in MLAs' pay increases because that bill will be the last to be debated.

Grounded after 24 years of ups, downs

Both elevators in the building will be automatic by December.

That will leave only the Times Building at 660 Fort and the Ritz Hotel at 710 Fort where the human factor survives.

Dorothy McVie is too polite to say she was bored with cracks about life having its ups and downs but she heard the line enough times.

She's seen premiers go up and come down. She often carried Dave Barrett and Bill Bennett up to the CFAX studios. She says they were both friendly.

Once, she carried a sheep to CFAX.

"They were from all walks of life. They all had a sense of humor. You have to have a sense of humor to do this job."

She'll miss the human contact.

The people who will have to look at flashing buttons instead of Dorothy McVie's smile will miss the human contact, too.

Kamloops mill workers strike

KAMLOOPS (CP) — About 30 pulp workers set up a picket line at Weyerhaeuser Canada Ltd. mill Monday night to protest progress in settling local issues still being dealt with in forest industry negotiations.

The workers are members of the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada (PPWC), the only one of three forest industry unions that has not yet ratified a new two-year contract.

Union president Angus McPhee has said ratification will be recommended as soon as several local problems are cleared up.

The Kamloops workers said they were not willing to wait and walked out, although local union head Richard Baker said they were not told to do so.

Company spokesman Glen Matheson said the strike is legal because the union had served 72-hour strike notice several weeks ago.

Meanwhile, in Prince Rupert, company spokesmen said that Canadian Cellulose Co. Ltd. negotiators and union officials moved closer to an end to the 20-day strike which has idled more than 700 workers and cost the company more than $1 million.

Spokesman Bob Swenarchuk said Monday that both sides met from Thursday through Sunday and "it didn't look as if there would be any more meetings until a general membership meeting, but this afternoon they're back at the table and that is encouraging."

Major outstanding issues include pay rates in certain categories, technical issues and a northern pay allowance.

Local islands named reserve

Lands Minister Jim Chabot also announced on the weekend other reserves have been established at the southern tip of the Queen Charlotte Islands and on a group of small islands on the west coast of the Queen Charlottes.

The Oak Bay reserve, seven hectares of land and 163 hectares of subtidal land, includes Alpha, Jemmy Jones and the Chain Islands and contains the largest seabird nesting colony in the Gulf of Georgia.

These islets are also rich biologically, supporting maritime meadows of rare flowers and, around their shores, interesting intertidal and subtidal marine life.

The Kerouard Islets reserve, on the southern tip of the Charlottes, is 130 hectares. It contains the province's largest sea-lion rookery and sea-bird nesting areas, Chabot said.

The 324-hectare Anthony Islets reserve, on the west coast, also contains sea-bird nesting areas and is a prime hunting ground of the rare peregrine falcon.

'Missing 13' rile NDP

The case of the 13 missing government reports has nettled the NDP who claim the Socreds are intentionally hindering the effectiveness of Her Majesty's loyal opposition.

Ernie Hall (NDP-Surrey) said Monday that he is awaiting a dozen government-initiated reports, some of which he asked about the first day the session opened in early June.

But the cabinet ministers just play games with the requests that the reports be tabled for public scrutiny, Hall said.

They joke when they think the question hasn't been asked properly, but make no effort to indicate if the reports will ever be made public.

Hall said the deliberate refusal to respond to reasonable NDP requests is hindering the opposition.

Asked about a possible motive, Hall said: "I think they work on the motive of 'the less we give them, the better off we are'."

After Hall enumerated the 12 reports he said the government has received but not made public, Victoria NDP MLA Charles Barber jumped to his feet and said "make that lucky 13."

Barber asked acting Tourism Minister Don Phillips about the report from the board of directors of the B.C. Steamship Corp. which operates the Princess Marguerite.

Barber wants to know what future plans are in store for the Marguerite.

Phillips said he has't had a report, but will meet with the board if the house ever adjourns.

After a preamble on what good shape the B.C. economy is in, the minister said it was not his intent to play politics with the Marguerite, "but to look after it, and as I said in estimates, the ship is in good hands."

Hall said one of the most important reports the government is inexplicably sitting on is the Wes Black report for the health ministry on medical services in remote areas of the province.

Hall said the former Socred cabinet minister was paid a lot of money to carry out the investigation, and he is curious to see what he recommends.

Other reports include the report on the Cowichan estuary, the Vancouver Stock Exchange, the highways department interior ferries, Credit Unions, B.C. Buildings Corp., a child-beating death in Surrey, the natural gas pileline to Vancouver Island and the investment evaluation of B.C. Resources Investment Corp.

Webster tribute

The legislature paid tribute Monday to former MP and MLA Arnold Webster who died Friday at the age of 80.

"He was a gentleman, in every sense, who brought great distinction to the political life of the province," Premier Bill Bennett said.

Opposition leader Dave Barrett recalled that the deceased had served as leader of the Commonwealth Co-operative Federation, predecessor of the New Democratic Party, from 1953 to 1956.

Webster was subsequently elected MLA for Vancouver East, the seat Barrett now holds, and entered the legislature as opposition leader. He resigned in 1956 and had two terms as an MP.

Webster is survived by his wife, Daisy, also a former MLA.

The B.C. government will oppose any federal move to impose an export tax on natural gas, Premier Bill Bennett said Monday.

"They're not going to tax our gas," Bennett said in an interview. "That's British Columbia gas that belongs to the province. It's a provincial resource."

Bennett said he has not been approached by the federal government to discuss the matter.

Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed has said any attempt to impose the tax "would completely wipe out in one stroke" any possibility of a new era of federal-provincial co-operation.

"There would have to be a lot of serious thought on this by the federal government before any decision was made. They would have to be in communication and have some dialogue with the provinces or they will face a possible conflict."

Ottawa officials indicated last week that a tax on natural gas is being considered. But neither Prime Minister Clark nor Energy Minister Ray Hnatyshyn has made any public statements calling for such a levy.

Scientist leaves IOS for gov't job

He vacates the post of director-general of the federal Institute of Ocean Sciences (IOS) at Patricia Bay following 20 years of research and scientific administration on behalf of Canada, much of it in co-operation with international research and planning groups.

His major contribution to the field has been the development of an organization to conduct oceanographic research on the Pacific Coast, culminating with the official opening in March of the $21.7 million Pat Bay institute by Gov.-Gen. Edward Schreyer.

Stewart's move into the provincial sphere is seen as an indication of a shift in research impetus from the national government, where scientific activities have suffered through increasing financial restrictions in the past three years.

Education, Science and Technology Minister Pat McGeer said Stewart, as one of Canada's outstanding scientists, would be effective in developing the provincial role in science, research and promotion of high-technology industry.

Stewart said he is looking forward to the prospect of helping to make the historically resource-based B.C. economy more technological.

He will be responsible for the development of discovery parks planned for the university campuses to assist applied research for industry.

In addition, the B.C. Development Corp. is slated to take over the management of a 40-acre site on West Saanich Road opposite the ocean sciences institute which the federal government obtained for a marine technology park.

Stewart said his move was a development which had taken place in just the last six weeks. He had been offered the post by McGeer, and "everyone, including me, was taken by surprise," he said.

He was pleased to be leaving IOS with most of his objectives met since taking on the role of director of a West Coast oceanographic program in 1970.

By 1974, he was director-general of ocean and aquatic sciences for the environment department, now under the wing of the department of fisheries and oceans.

McGeer said the appointment of Stewart was made possible through a federal-provincial executive interchange program. It includes the assistant deputy's appointment to the Science Council of B.C. set up by the legislature last year.

STEWART
assistant deputy minister

He was with the Defence Research Board 11 years, and professor of physics and oceanography at University of B.C. for nine years and continues to be an honorary professor.

International responsibilities include presidency of the International Association of the Physical Sciences of the Ocean; and membership in the joint organizing committee of the Global Atmospheric Research Program, executive of the Scientific Committee in Ocean Research, and the Committee on Climate Change and the Ocean (CCCO), a body formed by SCOR and the UN Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission.

Some of these appointments now lapse and others expire this year, but Stewart will continue his role with CCCO.

Stewart's research and publications deal mainly with turbulence, oceanography and meteorology, and he said he hopes to continue his association with IOS scientists in connection with personal research interests.

Regional hydrographer Mike Bolton is acting director-general of IOS, but a permanent replacement for Stewart and restructuring of IOS administration is expected after a visit next month of G. N. Ewing, assistant deputy minister for ocean and aquatic sciences in Ottawa.

They will be available for use by students, writers and film makers when the archives has completed its conservation work on them.

The name of the person from whom the collection was bought and the amount paid for it was not revealed.

Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis said as a matter of policy museums don't make public the amounts paid for artifacts that would inflate values among speculators.

HOLDS DENTURES FIRM WITHOUT DAILY "FIXINGS"

No more "fixings" every morning with messy powders or creams. Even if dentures need "fixing" after every meal, here's important news. Snug cushions restore dentures' holding power so dentures stay comfortably tight for weeks. Snug, the soft, effective temporary aid, forms a "comfort bond" between dentures and gums. Sticks to dentures, not to gums. Rinse, scrub or soak Snug fresh and clean. Easy to remove, but won't wash off or flake away. So, end daily "fixings"! Use Snug to hold dentures comfortably tight for weeks.

Rent subsidies eyed

OTTAWA (CP) — The Clark government is considering subsidies for low-income renters as it takes a hard look at its promised mortgage and property tax deductibity plan for ways to remove its inequities and possible negative side effects.

An aide to Elmer MacKay, minister responsible for Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation, said there is no question the government remains committed to the mortgage and property tax plan — a cornerstone of the Conservative election platform.

But he said the government is looking at how lower-income homeowners could get more benefit from it as well as considering a limit on the duration of the program. Including subsidies for renters would meet a criticism that the plan offers nothing for the roughly 40 per cent of the population who don't own homes.

Finance Minister John Crosbie, who believes the mortgage plan had big appeal for voters in the May 22 election, said last week the plan will be part of his fall budget. But he added that ways to implement it still are being examined.

He said MacKay personally favors "some sort of shelter allowance for the elderly." He expected MacKay would make a recommendation to cabinet on the shelter allowance and the mortgage plan by the end of August.

Foothills hit with tariff cut

OTTAWA (CP) — The National Energy Board announced a tariff decision Monday which the builder of the proposed natural gas pipeline from Alaska has said will turn off financing for the $5 billion Canadian section of the project.

The board, federal regulatory agency for the oil and natural gas, said Foothills Pipe Line (Yukon) Ltd., must charge reduced tariffs in the first 12 months of operation of the pipeline.

It rejected recent Foothills arguments that private financing would be impossible if it could not charge full tariffs from the start. Instead the board followed the lead of the United States regulatory agency.

After saying Foothills and companies associated with it failed to substantiate their arguments, the energy board said: "Major industrial enterprises rarely generate normal profits in their first year of start-up."

In the first of several decisions the board must make concerning the pipeline that will take natural gas from Alaska's Prudhoe Bay through the Yukon and Alberta to the southern states, it also said Foothills may charge tariffs when the pipeline is completed in Canada, although the U.S. section may still be incomplete.

In a decision that opposes United States energy policy, it accepted Foothill's argument that it should be able to charge tariffs when it is in a position to deliver gas.

But the agency said it does not know whether U.S. natural gas customers will be willing to pay the Canadian company when the U.S. section still is being built.

Foothills told the board it is having financial difficulties as a result in a 22-month delay in start of construction because of congressional and regulatory difficulties in the U.S. Construction was to have started in January, 1981.

The board ruled that Foothills must charge so-called minimum bill or interim rates as defined by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission of the U.S. during the first year of start-up.

These charges take into account such things as operating and maintenance expenses, taxes and debt services.

The idea of the reduced charges is that customers should not have to pay high rates during a start-up period when the pipeline cannot deliver all the gas contracted for.

Alberta opens $5 billion tap

EDMONTON (CP) — Alberta might be willing to use its heritage savings trust fund to help the federal government pay its bills, Provincial Treasurer Lou Hyndman said Monday.

Hyndman said he would consider lending a portion of the fund, which contains about $5 billion, to the federal government under the fund's Canada investment division.

He said he has not been approached by Ottawa for a loan but noted that the federal government recently announced it will have to borrow about $10 billion in the near future to pay its bills.

Hyndman, in releasing the fund's third annual report, said it is too early to expect an overture from Ottawa about a loan because the new Progressive Conservative government is still assessing its financial position.

The annual report says the fund, which absorbs 30 per cent of the province's resource revenue, should hit $6.2 billion by the end of next March. The fund received $1.059 billion in non-renewable resource revenue and earned $294 million in investment interest during the fiscal year which ended last March 31.

Hyndman said a decision could come in a few weeks on opening the trust fund to direct investment in major business projects.

Asbestos Corp. loses round 2

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec government won yet another round Monday in its court battle with Asbestos Corp. Ltd., as an appeals judge rejected the company's effort to obtain a temporary injunction blocking expropriation of its Quebec-based assets.

But although the decision left Quebec free to nationalize the firm at any time, officials in the finance department continued to indicate a snap expropriation is unlikely, saying the government would prefer to work out a private purchase agreement with General Dynamics of St. Louis, Mo., the parent company of Asbestos Corp.

An early expropriation was also considered unlikely by lawyers for Asbestos Corp., who nevertheless declined to say if they were dropping the fight.

In Quebec City, a spokesman for Finance Minister Jacques Parizeau reiterated the government hopes to reach a negotiated settlement, without using the expropriation law passed in June.

"It is going to be a purchase agreement, that's for sure," the spokesman said.

UIC total dips

OTTAWA (CP) — Unemployment insurance payments in the January-May period this year totalled $2.18 billion, down from $2.34 billion in the same period in 1978, Statistics Canada reported Monday.

The federal agency said preliminary figures show an average of 894,000 received benefits each month out of 1.08 million applications in the January-May period.

In the same period in 1978, beneficiaries averaged 970,000 monthly out of 1.15 million applications.

An official at Statistics Canada said the lower payments were the result of tighter eligibility rules for unemployment insurance, a reduction of maximum benefits payable to 60 per cent from 66 2-3 per cent of insurable earnings and a lower unemployment level from a year ago.

Darvon danger

OTTAWA (CP) — There have been enough deaths caused by accidental misuse of the pain killer Darvon that the public should be warned, Dr. Ian Henderson, director of the federal government's drug bureau, said Monday.

Eli Lilly and Co. of Indianapolis, the largest manufacturer of the widely-prescribed drug, has announced it will begin immediately to issue consumer warnings about the potentially lethal dangers of taking the drug in greater than prescribed doses or with alcoholic beverages.

309 IN MEMORIAM

SMELSER - In lovng memory of a dear daughter and sister, Edna Smelser, laid to rest, one year ago.

Gone from us your smiling face,
Your happy, carefree ways,
The heart that won so many friends,
In happy by-gone days,
The happy years we once enloved,
How sweet their memory still,
This world can never fill.
Sadly missed, by Mother Valerie and family, Irish Smelser, and sisters.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN, AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS

Order fall plants now

How many times this year have you mentioned plants you intend to buy this fall? If your memory is anything like mine you will have forgotten more than half unless you have written your intentions in the garden notebook.

Over the years I have found it worthwhile to place an order for wanted plants as soon as I have made up my mind I want them.

GARDENING

Jack Beastall

When I know the plants will be here at planting time it is an incentive to have the places prepared for them. In that way they are not left lying around and deteriorating.

Once the plants are on order I am reasonably sure of getting them. Too often I have promised myself a certain plant then found the stocks sold out when planting time arrived.

Around this time of year some folks wish there were a fruit tree or two in the garden. Better than wishing, visit your local fruit tree nursery now and tag the trees you would like to have.

Some of these can be very difficult to obtain when advance orders have been filled and the remainder taken by the gardeners who always seem to be a little ahead with their work.

The same can happen in the case of the less common shrubs. Last year the dry fall prevented digging in the Fraser Valley at the normal time. This condition was followed by heavy rains and some flooding, and many plants were never lifted. The few that did arrive locally were not enough to fill the advance orders.

Lack of color in beds and borders at any period in summer can be corrected if you visit your plant nursery and see the number of plants in full bloom when your borders are bare of interest.

Ordering in summer not only makes sense it also makes it easier to plan the fall work, and the work goes much faster when everything is ready when planting time arrives.

Not many weeks ago we were wondering when the summer weather would arrive, and now many gardeners are asking when we shall get some rain.

At the time of writing there are a few patches of high cloud in the sky but no indication of a definite change, so we are maintaining the deep watering that has been needed since early April.

While the day to day weather is never the same as in the past an over-all pattern prevails. Records show that lack of rain in July is often followed by cloudy skies and showers in August.

This could well be, and the change is likely to take place on the change of phase of the moon. The first quarter of the present moon is tomorrow and full moon on Aug. 8.

When cloudy skies arrive it would be wise to have the sprinklers ready to go into action. Even without showers, the clouds will indicate increased relative humidity and less water will be lost than when the air is dry.

If the clouds bring showers or light rain so much the better. Sprinkling in the rain means that every drop of water applied will reach the soil, and with the damp air and dampened soil surface will penetrate much deeper than in a dry period.

This means a saving in the amount of water that goes through the meter and much greater benefit to the plants.

If possible, place a small sprinkler under the foliage of large bushes and those in a foundation planting. The mass of foliage on the plants at this time of year will not allow much rain to reach the root area. If no small sprinkler is at hand use an open end hose with low pressure, or better still a canvas soaker.

Let the rain moisten the soil in open areas and concentrate the artificial watering on the root area of the larger plants.

The most important point is not to let cloudy skies and a few drops of rain create the impression that watering is no longer needed. Co-operate with the weather and do a real good watering job.

Small-firm loan fund set at $5M

The B.C. government has set up a special $5 million program to provide low-interest business loans within the Lower Mainland, southern Vancouver Island and the Gulf Islands.

Economic Development Minister Don Phillips said in a press release Monday the program will provide funds for the improvement, expansion or establishment of new manufacturing or processing facilities in these areas.

PSAC quashes threat of Quebec breakaway

QUEBEC (CP) — Embittered Quebec members presented a major internal challenge to the Public Service Alliance of Canada Monday with their proposal to form a separate union within the national alliance.

But the proposal was rejected by a vote of 315-to-88, and there appeared no easy way to bridge the hostile rift between alliance executives and Quebec members who are locked into the PSAC by federal law.

Robert Martin, president of the Montreal district council, claimed his proposal had the support of 80 per cent of the 35,000 federal public servants who work in Quebec.

Alliance president Andy Stewart said he doubted Martin had that much support. But he acknowledged the issue, which has been festering for four years, caused him great concern, and that was why it was up for debate at the opening of the five-day convention.

Stewart said if Quebec was given a special component, other regions would demand the same "and the present structure of the union would have gone down the drain."

Martin said his purpose was to improve representation of Quebec members through the creation "of a Quebec power which would ensure the safeguarding of their socio-cultural interests within the PSAC."

A number of delegates who spoke against the proposal, including some francophone PSAC officers from Quebec, said Martin headed a minority faction that was trying to destroy the union.

The Quebec group said it now plans to ask Social Credit leader Fabien Roy to help them fight for changes in the federal law.

Foucault said alliance executives are insensitive to the special needs of Quebec members, and had to be pushed into taking a tough stand to retain the bilingualism bonus in the public service.

Delegates did not buy Martin's agrument that a Quebec union within the alliance would actually make the PSAC stronger by securing full participation of Quebec members.

The water was up to Mike's neck when he managed to push open a manhole cover and save himself just as rescue workers were beginning a search.

A fire department spokesmen said fire and ambulance crews figured "there wouldn't be much chance for him."

"How the heck do you measure the odds in something like that?" asked Larry Anderson. "It was probably the fact that he is stocky and a good swimmer that saved him."

The boy was swept into the unprotected opening of a storm sewer about 2.4 metres high and 1.5 metres wide. Bruce Richards of the city sewer division said there was a grate over the entrance last spring, but it was removed when debris accumulated.

"We know kids go into the storm tunnel sometimes," he said. But he added that grates sometimes close possible escape routes for children who get into the sewer by other means. Sunday's case was not "a clear-cut case in favor putting a grate on."

Indians reject talks proposal

OTTAWA (UPC) — The National Indian Brotherhood turned down a federal invitation to attend a series of constitutional talks on Indian rights saying it is vague and unacceptable.

Federal-Provincial Minister Bill Jarvis Monday asked spokesmen for Native people to be full partners at a series of federal-provincial talks in a letter to the NIB.

Almost immediately, the invitation was rebuffed by NIB official Art Manuel who said the offer was "very vague" and promised nothing.

"This whole letter is very vague and ambiguous. It does not define what they want and has left everything up in the air. In its present form, the letter is unacceptable," Manuel said in an interview.

"We want to be full partners and sit down and discuss all constitutional matters that affect Indians directly — including natural resources. We just don't want one meeting where we will be listened to politely, applauded and asked to leave the room," Manuel said.

Jarvis invited officials of the NIB and native groups to a special series of meetings, and in a letter to the NIB, promised that "Native people will be more than mere observers in future work on constitutional renewal."

"The government has clearly stated that we want the representatives of the Indian people, Inuit people and Metis and non-status Indians to participate fully in discussions," Jarvis said in the letter.

Racism taunts for Thatcher

Times News Services

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher today walked into a blisteringly hostile reception, including accusations of racism and arrogance, on her arrival in the Zambian capital of Lusaka for Wednesday's opening of the Commonwealth Conference.

Thatcher, in hints that her Conservative government will move toward rapprochement with Zimbabe-Rhodesia, "demonstrates the blind and pusillanimous arrogance that has marked successive British governments' attitudes to Rhodesia," said The Times of Zambia, a mouthpiece for the government of Kenneth Kaunda in a Monday editorial.

Another government-owned newspaper, The Daily Mail, went further and described Mrs. Thatcher as "racially-prejudiced" because she "openly supports rebels who have been condemned by every sensible person in the world."

Lambasting her for the second straight day, the Mail today said Zambia "is a free country, and we shall not stand anybody showing arrogance or making those Margaret racist gestures to (former Rhodesian prime minister Ian) Smith and (current Zimbabwe-Rhodesian leader Abel) Muzorewa on our soil."

The taunts hurled at Thatcher have scrupulously avoided mention of the Queen who is on the fourth day of a visit to Zambia in preparation for the conference.

Britain's Conservative newspapers have responded in kind to the attack.

The London Daily Mail said Mrs. Thatcher was greeted "with the diplomatic courtesy a gang of muggers might reserve for a solitary woman travelling on a late-night tube (subway)."

The Daily Telegraph warned her not to be coerced into delaying the lifting of economic sanctions against Zimbabwe-Rhodesia, saying "this would be the triumph of the bullet over the ballot box."

Since Mrs. Thatcher has made no public statement since her arrival Monday, the Lusaka press presumably is anticipating that at the 39-state conference opening Wednesday she will try to defend Muzorewa and Smith.

The issues of whether to recognize the Muzorewa government and the potential lifting of economic sanctions against his government are expected to dominate the week-long meeting.

French labels or goods seized, merchants told

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The federal consumer affairs ministry has warned health food wholesalers and other importers in B.C. to comply with bilingual labelling regulations or have their goods seized.

A ministry spokesman said today it is the the first time a seizure warning has been issued.

In past years, the ministry had just asked for voluntary compliance without accompanying the request with a threat.

The warning has gone out to all importers and not just health food companies, he said.

The crackdown on products without the French label, one Victoria distributor said, could endanger the health food industry.

Michael Monahan, owner of Bright Life Health Food Distributors, said Ottawa has threatened to seize most of his products if he fails to get French on the label by Aug. 26.

He said he couldn't possibly comply with the ultimatum in such a short period of time.

He has written a letter of protest to federal Consumer Affairs minister Allan Lawrence on behalf of British Columbia health food wholesalers and retailers.

"I don't know why they (the federal government) should suddenly pick on the health food industry," he said. "They never enforced this stupid regulation in the past."

Monahan said the new directive has put the health food industry in an impossible situation.

"About 90 per cent of our goods comes from the United States. Most of these products are not available anywhere in Canada. And these companies in California don't want to have to put French labels on their products.

"They think the law is stupid. I think it's stupid, the retailers think it's stupid. If they want bilingual labels it would make more sense here to put Chinese on the labels.

"This regulation hits the small companies more than the big ones. The major companies can afford to pay the extra cost of bilingual labels."

Monahan said he suspects major Canadian food companies have pressured the federal government to enforce the regulation to put small competitors out of business.

Monahan has written to local MPs and to the provincial ministry of consumer and corporate affairs for help.

A local health food retailer, John Kelly of Country Cupboards Natural Foods, said the bilingualism labelling order would be a severe blow to all health food retailers.

"Many will be forced out of business if this regulation is enforced."

Soviet vessel rams fishboat

Three Port Alberni residents escaped unharmed today when their fishboat was in collision with a Soviet freighter in the Alberni Canal at 12:45 a.m.

The Vladimir Mayakovsky, under the command of Capt. L. Khonechenko and with pilot Capt. A. H. Ross aboard, was seaward-bound from Port Alberni in the China Creek area when she was in collision with the 29-foot gillnetter Full Nelson.

The fishboat's owner, Laurie Nelson, and his passengers, Rose Stewart and Sheila August, were thrown into the water and the Full Nelson sank to the waterline.

They were picked up by the fishing vessel Julia Evelyn II and were later transferred to the pilot boat MV Riley.

Nelson was admitted to the West Coast General Hospital for examination and later released.

Port manager Capt. Don Brookes said there was a large fleet of gillnetters and seiners in the canal at the time of the incident.

In addition, a spokesman for the RCMP Alberni detachment said it was foggy at the time.

B.C. alcoholics start young

The typical alcohol abuser is a 25-year-old unskilled single male earning less than average salary who has been drinking since the age of 13, a government study has found.

Admitted alcohol abusers in the province spend more than $50 a month on liquor.

Interestingly enough, this is about the same amount spent by well-paid, heavy drinking men aged 18 to 24.

Problem drinkers number about 11 per cent of the drinking population. The survey found that 9 in 10 British Columbians consume at least some alcohol.

The report was prepared for the ministry of consumer and corporate affairs following an extensive survey late last year.

The study found young drinkers are considered to be the second most serious school problem after drugs. In the adult world, alcohol-related problems are third in a list of social concerns after inflation and unemployment.

The ministry describes problem drinkers as those who consume alcohol to excess at least 10 per cent of the time.

The study found the majority of drinkers consume liquor moderately and infrequently. Even so, most began drinking at the age of 16.

The category of heavy drinkers most likely to lose control of their habit on occasion tends to be males, aged 18 to 24, earning more than $20,000 a year and gainfully employed.

The survey found three out of five drinkers have consumed alcohol to excess on occasion.

Many of those admit to drinking at least eight drinks at a sitting while some say they have consumed more than 10.

The study also found that 40 per cent of the population drink outside their homes at least once a week — mostly in restaurants and beer parlors.

Drinkers in their early teens are not being served in liquor outlets, but are obtaining alcohol from their homes or from older friends.

Few of the people surveyed said they supply liquor to their children for their parties. But one in three of the problem drinkers admit they supply alcohol to their under-aged children.

Older teens are entering licensed premises in ever-increasing numbers. Last year, charges against minors increased 52 per cent to an all-time high of 4,008.

Rationing sobering thought

NUUK, Greenland (UPI) — Hard times are ahead for the world's hardiest drinkers in Greenland, where the bottle provides comfort against the Arctic cold and desolation.

Under a new law, Greenland's rugged fur trappers and fishermen — and everyone else — will have to slap their ration coupons as well as their cash on the bar to get service.

A typical night's boozing will be moderate in the extreme, consisting of 2.4 bottles of beer, 0.4 bottles of wine, or 0.1 bottles of hard liquor.

Rationing is Greenland's answer to chronic alcoholism among its 50,000 inhabitants.

Under the rationing scheme, each adult will be given 72 coupons a month.

Owner of blazing boat must pay for damages

VANCOUVER (CP) — The owner of a pleasure craft that caught fire at Coal Harbor Marina two years ago was ordered Monday to pay for the $166,882 damage to adjacent boat shelters and boats caught in the blaze.

The British Columbia Supreme Court award by Mr. Justice E. Davie Fulton was against Harrison Doig, owner of the 36-foot Golden Summer, and will go to Walithy Charters Ltd., Deacon Marine Ltd., Landmark Marine Ltd. and Capilano Shipping Co. Ltd.

The Golden Summer caught fire about two hours after it had been towed back to its dock by a Vancouver police boat after a leak in the cruiser's fuel system interrupted a fueling operation at a Coal Harbor gas barge and left gas in the bilge. Doig turned off the vessel's electric switches, had the bilge flushed and opened all the hatches before returning his boat to the dock in the inlet between Stanley Park and part of downtown Vancouver.

Mr. Justice Fulton said that neither Doig nor the officers in command of the police boat were, in the circumstances, negligent in returning the vessel to the dock, but he held that Doig, realizing from the smell of the fumes remaining in the boat that there must still be gas in the bilge, was negligent in staying aboard to off-load supplies.

In moving about during this operation, said the judge, Doig caused a spark in a highly volatile atmosphere that touched off the blaze.

"I am satisfied that if he had got himself and his passengers off the boat as soon as it was berthed at the marina, this fire would not have happened," Mr. Justice Fulton said.

Outlook bleak for Canada

PARIS (CP) — A bleak forecast of continuing high jobless rates and strong inflationary pressures is contained in a report on Canada's economic prospects published today by the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development.

In its annual economic survey of Canada, the 24-member OECD — made up of the world's major non-Communist countries — also warns that skilful manoeuvring will be needed to prevent the dollar from slipping further against other world currencies.

However, on a brighter note, the report says the short-term impact of oil price increases is likely to be felt less in Canada than in other Western industrialized countries.

Ironically, the report suggests that Ottawa consider broadening the powers of the National Commission on Inflation in a bid to tackle the country's economic problems. Last week, Finance Minister John Crosbie announced that the board is to be disbanded.

The report says the commission "will undoubtedly play a useful role in improving general public understanding of the inflationary process, but this may not be enough."

"It could, for instance, be considered whether the commission could become more actively involved as an arbiter in the (labor) negotiation process in order to better reconcile sectorial claims with the national interest."

The 64-page report also says "it would seem desirable" to lift measures protecting industries that are not internationally competitive despite regional considerations."

It cites as an example of a protected industry Quebec's clothing business, the province's largest employer in the manufacturing sector.

Turning to predictions for the coming year, the report says unemployment might climb to 8.5 per cent, unfavorable productivity levels are expected to continue and little change is likely in Canada's balance of payments deficit — expected to be about $5 billion in the coming year.

Unlike other members of the 24-country OECD, Canada's balance of payments deficit grew last year, the report says.

TOWN TALK

Bookworms and staff of the central public library downtown who were looking forward to moving, at long last, into larger and modern quarters in the new B.C. government building on Broughton will have to wait a little longer.

The move to the red brick Alfred Waddington building (an apt name for a building housing the library; he wrote the first book published in B.C. 120 years ago) was scheduled for October. However, there's still a lot of work to be done before the books can be reshelved and moving day has been pushed back again.

"The B.C. Buildings Corp. is still working on the building," said a library spokesman. Construction was held up while the four core municipalities wrangled among themselves and with the province over rent.

Tentatively, the library will relocate early in 1980, "possibly February."

Howard In Particular is a 14 minute film about a man's nightmarish loss of imagination as he attends his simulated retirement party at the Cocktail Fruit Factory. The company, where the man has been a banana slicer, is so big that they can't hold realretirement parties.

The film was directed by Atom Egoyan of Victoria and won a first in the scenario category of the Canadian National Exhibition Film Festival.

"They wanted to see so many of them I decided it would be easier if we just joined the parade ourselves."

That's how he and Penny McKay, another bus driver, got involved in the Great Inner Tube Race where, as the Transit Tubers, they won first prize in the parade's mixed entry category, edging Bernie's Fried Chicken.

"There's never any shortage of children for our float," Burgess said. "There were three of mine and three of hers and a couple of other youngsters from the neighborhood."

The children help prepare the float and they get to do most of the waving. They were in the Oak Bay Tea Party parade and at Esquimalt's Buccaneer Days before appearing in the Great Inner Tube Race parade on Sunday.

It will be a happy occasion for Frances Walker Wednesday when she celebrates her 100th birthday with her friends at the Gorge Road Hospital. Her two daughters, Kathleen McCutcheon and Edith Arthur will be present.

She was born in the English Lake District, Lake Windermere, Westmoreland, where they say centenarians are not unusual. She and her husband, who has predeceased her, came to Canada in 1907 and lived in Qu'Appele, Sask., before moving to Vancouver and then Victoria.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. J.O. Thomas:

Your son, Peter Thomas, is in Hong Kong and doing well and he has written to you.

But he addressed his letter to J.O. Thomas, 2344, Oak Bay, Victoria. And there's no such place,

She would like Mr. and Mrs. Thomas to contact her, especially because the letter contains a number of photos.

"It is quite a coincidence because my initials are J.O. and I have a son named Peter but the letter is not from my son. I hope Town Talk can help me to find Mr. and Mrs. Thomas."

She can be reached at 383-2519.

"Holy blazing barstool, Batman. Do you think it could have been deliberate?"

"It's hard to say, Boy Wonder. The folks at the Douglas Hotel and the Victoria Fire Department just can't be sure.

But early Saturday, someone smelled smoke in the hotel cocktail lounge and called the fire department. Firefighters finally found the fire in the foam atop a barstool.

"Must have been a good party Friday night, Batman."

Who was Wolcott?

He was the second son of John Wolcott of Tolland, Somersetshire, England, who emigrated to the United States in 1630, settling first in Dorsetshire, Mass., and later Windsor, Conn.

He served on the Committee of Twelve in Connecticut's first general assembly in 1637 and was elected a member of the House of Magistrates (Senate) in 1643. He was annually re-elected during his lifetime.

Two-hundred descendants formed a society in 1907 at Warren, Ohio, to keep his name alive.

The Laurel Point Inn get-together will be the first reunion to be held in Canada.

Betty Wolcott George, 2115 Central, will be the hostess.

Little Leaguer Chad Lumley will meet big leaguers Bruce Bochte and Danny Meyer, Seattle Mariners fielders, at their home game Friday in a special trip arranged by Victoria supporters.

The eight-year-old Saanich boy suffered severe injuries in a parking lot accident a year ago and has undergone a series of operations that are hoped to restore 30 per cent use of his arm.

Part of the medical expense was provided by a benefit concert by the B-Jay Roberts and VI Country band, who will be on the dockside as Chad and his mother sail aboard Princess Marguerite.

Trixie keeps those sheep on the lamb

By PAUL MINVIELLE
Times Staff

The small black dog was a blur as she streaked across the brown grass, up one side of the sloping field and beyond four nervous sheep.

A whistle from the dog's owner sent her in a wide arc, bringing her in behind the sheep, and a second later they were running.

The dog was Trixie, this year's Canadian novice champion, and at sheepdog trials on Salt Spring Island on the weekend, she showed off her winning form for some 1,200 fans who turned out to cheer the dogs and savor Salt Spring lamb.

Maintaining what turned out to be a perfect distance, Trixie kept the sheep moving, but never so close as to cause the small flock to stop and make a stand. Conversely, she stayed close enough to prevent them from simply stopping for a breather.

The sheep thundered between two steel posts, hopped a ditch and headed straight for Trixie's owner, John Wickson of Merville.

They circled Wickson and he and Trixie then moved the sheep through a chute. Once through, it was simply a matter of penning the foursome long enough to get the gate closed.

The ditch turned out to be a stumbling block for several dogs at the trials, and it seemed that almost every one of Ted Akerman's fuzzy foursomes contained at least one independent-minded beast.

One run enjoyed by the crowd featured two border collies named Jack and Jill, who worked in perfect unison to move five ducks around the field and into the pen.

The trials were especially heartwarming to Mrs. W.P. Evans and her daughter and grandson, Daisy and Alan Gear, who were on hand to present the W.P. Evans Memorial Trophy to Wickson and Trixie. Bill Evans moved to Salt Spring from England in 1912, and except for a six-month stint of managing a Duncan farm, he lived the next 68 years on the island.

Evans was noted for several things. He started the first herd of registered Jersey cows on the island, and for many years he served as the island vet. The year after he died, his family set up a trophy to commemorate another first in Bill Evans' life — the introduction of working border collies to the B.C. scene.

As interest in working border collies on the island waned in the years after 1969, the trials were moved off island to such places as Duncan and Saanich. But Saturday's turnout was enough to convince the Salt Spring Island Farmers Institute that the trials are on the island to stay for a while.

Car parks endorsed

Provision of two new parking buildings to serve the northern downtown core was endorsed today by city council planning and zoning committee.

The recommendation, from the Victoria Advisory Planning Commission, was hailed by committee chairman Ald. Bob Wright as a means of keeping life in the downtown area, "regardless of how many shopping centres they want to build in the outlying area."

Committee members passed the recommendation along to council that the next parkades, timed for need and available financing, should be located near the corner of Pandora and Government, and in the southwest area forming part of public land developments on Wharf Street. It should have at least 260 spaces.

The APC rejected a suggestion that the 800 block between Yates and View be given priority for parking development.

The commission affirmed the city's parkade development policies, including the accommodation of customer parking as first priority, using any surplus space by renting to commuters, and the enhancement of future parkade appearance by mixing and layering shops, parking facilities, offices and apartments.

Co-op housing board backed

More than three-quarters of the co-operative members present also voted to expel dissident Ernest Blow from the co-operative effective Aug. 31.

Blow, expelled for conduct detrimental to the interests of the association, left the meeting with his wife, Gonda, but not before stating that he and other dissident members have taken their case to the attorney-general's ministry.

He said the ministry has been asked to conduct an investigation into the co-operative's affairs.

Co-operative chairman Derek Griffin said today the meeting left no doubt that the majority of the residents have confidence in the co-operative's management.

There are 86 co-operative members and 49 were at Monday's meeting.

Blow earlier circulated a petition calling for the removal of the board of directors and scheduled a special meeting for Aug. 8.

Griffin said 18 members signed the petition but did so for various reasons, including dissatisfaction by four or five with a new monthly assessment structure that requires occupants on welfare to pay more than those gainfully employed.

He said Monday's vote showed that the majority of the co-operative members don't support Blow.

Goult enters race

Former Oak Bay alderman John Goult announced Monday he will run for mayor of the municipality in November's election.

Goult becomes the second mayorality candidate. Ald. Shirley Dowell announced in May she will seek the post.

Goult served as alderman for eight years, not seeking re-election last November.

Mayor Brian Smith, elected MLA for Oak Bay-Gordon Head constituency May 10, has announced he will not seek re-election.

A former zoning committee chairman, Goult said he will campaign on the need to retain the status quoe in Oak Bay.

Dowell, a former income tax assessor, was first elected to council in 1970 when she ran on a platform opposing plans for a high-rise development on the Victoria Riding Academy site on Cedar Hill Cross Road.

Q. Can you tell me if the collected writings of Petter Dass, the Norweigian poet, have ever been published.? W.J.R.

A. Yes. They were edited by Dr. A.E. Eriksen between 1873 and 1877.

Phoney SIN card checks urged on immigrants

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Employers of seasonal workers should start asking more questions about people they hire to make sure they are legally permitted to work in Canada, the manager of the Victoria immigration office said today.

Gerry Elliot made the comment after three East Indians were discovered last week working without an employment permit on a farm owned by Saanich Ald. Geoff Vantreight.

Elliot said the three — Manjit Singh Bains, 29, Amol Singh Gill, 28, and Manjit Singh Pannu, 31 — had used social insurance numbers of other persons who had legally immigrated to Canada three to four years ago.

The deception wasn't discovered until earlier this month.

They were sentenced to 14 days in jail on Friday when they pleaded guilty to a violation of the Immigration Act. They will be deported to their homeland on their release. All three had worked for Vantreight for more than a year.

Elliot said there is no way to tell how many people are using other persons' insurance numbers to get work because there is no cross-checking system to detect impersonators.

The immigration branch must rely on employers to check the people they hire, although it places no legal responsibility on them to delve more deeply into their employees' backgrounds.

"We'd appreciate it if they would ask one or two more questions," he said.

Elliot said most major companies are already co-operating but smaller businesses, particularly those in agriculture, tend to accept the SIN card at face value.

He said it may be difficult to get the co-operation of farmers because "who's going to scare off a guy willing to work?"

Elliot said employers also should be wary of anyone who has an insurance number beginning with the digit 9.

Such numbers are issued to students, temporary workers and persons who have investments in Canada and need a SIN card for tax purposes.

If a person has such a number and is seeking work a check should be made to find out if he has a record of landing as an immigrant or an employment authorization permit, Elliot said.

Transmission problem cause of power failure

A transmission problem from the mainland caused a power outage between 5:32 p.m. and 6:03 p.m. Monday on Salt Spring Island and parts of Saanich and the Colwood area.

The power loss caused lights in the Victoria area to flicker momentarily. A similar situation occurred just after 8 a.m. today.

A B.C. Hydro spokesman said today's flicker was caused by a disturbance on the Island line between Nanaimo and Dunsmuir.

Coincidentally, about the time of Monday evening's power outage, a fuse blew at the Mount Tolmie reservoir pumping station, which services much of the southern half of Saanich and Gordon Head.

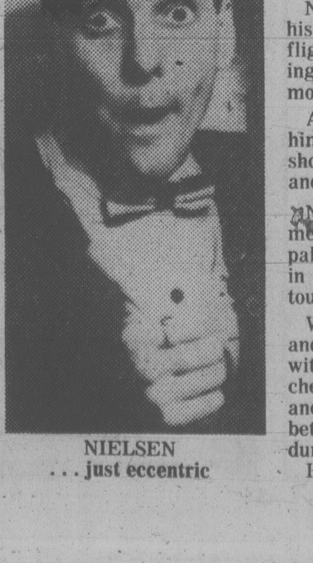
Cheap Trick: weird image, solid rock



NIELSEN

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY
Times Staff

The interview with Cheap Trick's Rick Nielsen doesn't begin on an encouraging note.

Nielsen, who is supposed to be in his room resting after a morning flight from Calgary, is in fact zooming about the streets of Victoria on a moped.

Wearing his trademark dark cap and bow tie stamped repeatedly with tiny Cheap Trick slogans, a checkerboard sweater, baggy pants and track shoes, he looks like a cross between a slimmed-down Tweedledum and Alvin the Chipmonk.

He talks like Jack Benny on benzedrine; the droll, animated voice, erratic hand movements and rolling eyes complement the costume.

Flanked by group member Tom Petersson and two representatives from Epic records, which released the enormously successful Live from Budokan in Canada, we get into the elevator with several other people. It stops suddenly and refuses to budge. Nielsen stomps on the floor, it starts moving briefly, then halts. Nielsen jumps up and down and the contraption jerks upward hestitantly.

When the door opens on the fifth floor everybody except Nielsen rushes out. He calmly continues the ride up to his room on the 14th floor.

Settled on the couch, he orders beer and cheese plates from room service and starts to talk about Cheap Trick's appeal.

"I used to be called neurotic; now I'm just considered eccentric," said Nielsen.

"I remember when we started, people said man, you've got to change your image."

Cheap Trick's weird image and onstage antics have been exploited to attract the curious to performances, but he says its solid rock and roll and artistic integrity that keeps them buying records and will assure the band's longevity.

Cheap Trick is not an overnight success, even though it may appear that way to some.

Popular in the midwestern United States as a club band, they started opening for headliners like Kiss and building a solid following of their own.

Hot stuff in Japan and Europe for several years, success in North America is only beginning to catch up. Live at Boudokan, recorded during a Japanese tour 1½ years ago, went double-platimum in the U.S. and turned the group into superstars in Canada as well.

"It really opened up for us about two years ago. We're just getting our audience."

The fact the live album shares a spot at the top of the disco-laden charts with artists like Donna Summer is a good sign for the group's irreverent, hard-driving rock, he feels.

Nielsen believes the band will live on when other top rock band fade away because it remains true to its origins. The musicianship and the style are as solid as ever and won't change.

AM radio hits like Surrender, Aint That a Shame and I Want You to Want Me don't tell the story, he insists.

A knock on the door and the waiter comes in with the food.

"Cheap Trick," he shrieks pointing his finger. "I love you guys."

Toronto

Eight of the 14 stock groups declined, with the largest drop in oil and gas. Management companies led the six gainers.

Trading was halted at the opening in shares of Simpsons Ltd. pending the outcome of a shareholders meeting. The stock last traded at $3.65.

Trading was halted at 11:50 a.m. in shares of United Canadian Shares Ltd. but resumed trading at 12:45 p.m. Dominion Tanners Ltd. said it bought 333,000 shares of United Canadian at an undisclosed price to bring its holdings to 52 per cent. No further stock purchases are planned.

Vancouver

Prices were down in heavy trading today on the Vancouver Stock Exchange. Volume to 10:50 a.m. was 2,654,306 shares.

Daon Development led trading on the industrials, down ⅜ at $16 on 5,700 shares. Hal Roach Studios was unchanged at 4.20 on 1,900, Ambassador was unchanged at .61 on 1,575 and Balco was unchanged at $16.½ on 1,500. Gregory was unchanged at $6½ and Grouse Mountain was up .05 at .75.

On the resource and development board, Saxton was unchanged at $2.30 on 617,358, Andex Mines was unchanged at .29 on 122,000, North Hart Resources was unchanged at .34 on 57,000 and Rio Plata Silver was down .14 at 100 on 34,100.

New York

The stock market staged a strong advance today as the dollar strengthened and the price of gold fell.

Gainers led losers by more than a 2-to-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

London

Industrials and banks firmed while golds eased and oils were mixed.

Canadian shares were also mixed.
